VICTORY AT LAST!

THE FIRST MESSAGE.

ENGLAND GREETS AMERICA

QUEEN VICTORIA

TO

PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

DISTINCT COMPLETION

OF THE

GREAT WORK OF THE CENTURY.

The Old World and the New United.

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS.

The Message of Queen Victoria to President Buchanan.

To the Honorable the President of the United States:

Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great international work, in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest.

[NOTE.—The above Message was received by the President, with some doubts as to its authenticity; but the matter was relieved of all doubt by the following message from the Superintendent of the Newfoundland Line:]

TRINITY BAY, Monday, Aug. 16—7 P. M.

The Message to the President, purporting to be from the Queen, actually came over the Atlantic Cable from Valentia, Ireland, and is unquestionably authentic. The President's reply will be sent as soon as received.

A. MACKAY, Superintendent.

The President's Reply.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 16, 1858.

To Her Majesty VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain:

The President cordially reciprocates the congratulations of Her Majesty, the Queen, on the success of the great international enterprise accomplished by the science, skill, and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious, because far more useful to mankind, than was ever won by conquest on the field of battle.

May the Atlantic Telegraph under the blessing of Heaven prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument destined by Divine Providence to diffuse religion, civilization, liberty and law throughout the world. In this view will not all nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration that it shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in passing to their places of destination, even in the midst of hostilities? (Signed)

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Message from the British to the American Directors.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, New-York:

Europe and America are united by telegraph. Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good will towards men.

The Excitement About the Queen's Message

From the time the first message concerning the operation of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable was received yesterday, until 10 o'clock at night, when the various bulletins gave what purported to be an abstract of the Queen's dispatch to President BUCHANAN, there were crowds of people on the TIMES Square, waiting, with more or less impatience, for the announcement of the Simon Pure message. They had been hoaxed by the Herald, in relation to the working of the line, and in relation to the whereabouts of the Niagara, and were determined not to swallow anything more that came through Plum that, unless its correspondent should be vouched for by some reliable establishment. They waited, and the longer they waited the more the excitement increased. Whenever anything later was placed upon the TIMES bulletin, they would crowd around it in a dense throng—those in the periphery of the circle standing on tiptoe, against the centre of attraction, in vain to read it, and those near the centre shouting to the periphery, to hold its tongue and listen. While this occurred, the newsboys would venture onto old papers, and announce the Message. The sight would buy them up rapidly, and each under a lamp to peruse them, and discover that they had been sold. Then another bulletin would appear, and similar results would be the result and so they kept it up until late hour. When excited by their shouts, they drew crowds as mere by their bulletins, they gave vent to their feelings in a manner which would have astonished the Sachems of Tammany.

How the News Was Received Elsewhere.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Aug. 16.

The intelligence of the reception of the Queen's Message rapidly spread throughout the city, and this evidence of the successful working of the Atlantic Telegraph occasioned much rejoicing. In some quarters, however, its authenticity was questioned, until a dispatch from the General Agent of the Associated Press removed all doubts. The first information on the subject to the President was communicated through Senator BIGLER, from information obtained from the Washington Associated Press Agency, when the President returned to the city from the Soldiers' Home, and received at the White House the message from Her Majesty Queen VICTORIA. He then prepared a suitable reply.

The Mayor of Washington, this afternoon, sent a message to the City Councils recommending that measures be taken to celebrate the success of the Atlantic Telegraph. Special Committees are appointed to agree on the programme.

BOSTON, Monday, Aug. 16.

The successful working of the Atlantic Telegraph will be celebrated in this city to-morrow, as follows: One hundred guns will be fired on the Common, at noon, and all the bells in the city rung. In the evening, the trees on the Common will be hung with French and Chinese lanterns; all the city buildings will also be illuminated, and four bands of music will discourse music on the Common. The citizens generally will also illuminate their residences.

ALBANY, Monday, Aug. 16—10½ P. M.

There is immense excitement here owing to the receipt of the Queen's Message. As soon as the intelligence reached the city, rockets were fired from opposite the telegraph office, bonfires blazed in all the streets, and the greatest rejoicing prevailed. Cannons are now being fired and the bells are ringing.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Aug. 16.

A salute of one hundred guns will be fired here at seven o'clock to-morrow morning, and all the bells rung, in honor of the successful working of the Ocean Telegraph.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 16—10 P. M.

The news of the successful working of the Atlantic Cable and of the receipt of the Queen's Message was received here with frantic demonstrations of joy. The bells were rung, cannon fired, steam whistles blown, and the most jubilant excitement prevailed.

UTICA, N. Y., Monday, August 16th.

There was a general exultation here on the receipt of the Queen's Message. Cannons and bells and cheers gave utterance to the general joy, while bonfires were lighted everywhere. The Herald office was brilliantly illuminated, and the whole city is alive with enthusiasm and rejoicing.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Monday, August 16.

The receipt of the Queen's Message caused great excitement throughout the City. St. Paul's chimes, together with all the church and fire bells are ringing. Crowds congregate in the streets, and immense enthusiasm prevails. Preparations for a grand illumination are in progress.

ELMIRA, Monday, Aug. 16—10 P. M.

Bells are ringing, cannons firing, and manifestations of joy are on the lips of every man, woman and child at the successful working of the Atlantic Telegraph. A grand celebration will take place to-morrow in honor of the event.

HORNELLSVILLE, Monday, Aug. 16—10 P. M.

The Queen's message was received here with firing of cannon and of small arms, ringing of bells, lighting of bonfires, &c. Main-street and the Telegraph Office are brilliantly illuminated. The firemen are out in torch-light procession, headed by the Hornellsville Brass Band. Engine bells and whistles are also sounding their jubilee.

ITHACA, N. Y., August 16—10 P. M.

Upon the receipt of the Queen's Message, the Telegraph-Office here and other buildings were brilliantly illuminated. Cannon are now firing, flags flying, bonfires blazing, bells ringing, and WHITLOCK's brass band is playing English and American national airs in front of the Telegraph Office.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Monday, Aug. 16—11 P. M.

The news of the successful working of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable, and the receipt of the Queen's Message, produced the wildest excitement among our citizens. Grand preparations are being made for a celebration to-morrow.

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 16—10 P. M.

The announcement of the receipt of the Queen's Message to President BUCHANAN was received here with the greatest enthusiasm. Guns were fired, bells rung, music, &c. Extensive arrangements are completed for illuminating, &c., on Tuesday evening.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Aug. 16.

The Mayor has issued a proclamation congratulating the citizens of Baltimore on the success of the Atlantic Telegraph, and recommending the firing of a salute of two hundred guns, the ringing of all the bells in the city, and displaying of flags from the public buildings and shipping, between 12 and 1 o'clock to-morrow.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Monday, Aug. 16.

The reception of the Queen's Message was announced by a grand display of fireworks by the Directors of the National Telegraph Company. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and all doubts respecting telegraphic communication across the Atlantic are thoroughly dispelled. The City authorities are making great preparations to celebrate the event.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Monday, Aug. 16.

The receipt of the Queen's Message here occasioned a tremendous excitement. Large bodies of men headed with bands of music paraded the streets this evening, bonfires were lighted, and bells were rung for half an hour in honor of the great event.

UNITED STATES HOTEL,
LONG BRANCH, N. Y., Monday, Aug. 16.

All hail to the complete success of the "Wonder of the Age," the Ocean Telegraph. We are celebrating it by fireworks, music, and dancing.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Aug. 16.

The Queen's Message was received by the National Telegraph Line at 7 o'clock this evening.

It caused much excitement, and the disbelievers are now satisfied.

Joint Committee on the Telegraph Cable—Letter from Com. Stewart and Captain Dayman.

The Joint Committee assembled for the fifth occasion on Monday, in the City Hall, Alderman THOS MCSPEDON in the Chair.

A telegraphic communication was received from Commander JOSEPH DAYMAN, of H. M. steam-sloop Gorgon, accepting the proffered hospitality of the Corporation on the forthcoming celebration. Ordered to be printed in the minutes.

A communication was received by telegraph from Admiral HOUSTON STEWART, of the British Navy, declining such hospitality, from the pressure of other and professional engagements. Ordered to be printed.

They are as follows:

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Saturday, August 14th, 1858.

Chas. T. McClenachan, Sec. Committee of Common Council, N. Y.:

SIR: I beg that you will convey to the Common Council of the City of New-York the best thanks of myself and the officers of this ship for the hospitality and kindness shown us by their kind invitation. We will give us the most sincere pleasure [illegible] the first fruit of the united labors of the American and English naval officers.

JOSEPH DAYMAN,
Com. of H. M. S. Sloop Gorgon.

HALIFAX, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1858.

C. T. MCCLENACHAN, Secretary of Committee of the Common Council, New-York:

SIR: Your telegraphic of yesterday have both reached me. I am much flattered by the invitation of the Common Council of the City of New-York to be present at the celebration of that great and most important achievement which has just been accomplished, and it is with much regret that I find myself compelled to decline the distinguished honor, my duties demanding my services elsewhere. With respect to the Gorgon, I have already signified to Mr. FIELD my inability to interfere in any way with Capt. DAYMAN's proceedings. He is not under my orders; I have no notice whatever concerning him, and he has instructions direct from the Admiralty, by which he must be guided. I beg you will convey my grateful acknowledgments to all the members of the Common Council, together with my cordial good wishes for the successful issue of their intention to commemorate an event which I earnestly hope will materially tend to cement those feelings of amity and good-will which ought ever to prevail between the United States and Great Britain.

HOUSTON STEWART.

Messrs. LILIENDAHL and HAGENSIE were present, and said they could not agree as to which of them should display the centre piece of fireworks in front of the City Hall. Neither of them was willing to exhibit in any other situation, nor could they combine to display the same evening at the same place.

Alderman MCSPEDON said that, prior to any offer having been made by either of these gentlemen, the Committee, in view of the short time originally expected to transpire before the arrival of the Queen's message, had ordered of Mr. EDDY a certain quantity of fireworks, displaying peculiar designs and mottoes, and had paid for, or were liable to pay for them. It was to be regretted that these voluntary offers of pyrotechnic displays had not been made to the Committee a little earlier, as it would have saved expense.

A communication was received from F. GREEN, Jr., desiring the Committee to use show-wagons with proper emblems in the procession. Ordered on file.

The Committee then adjourned until next day, having first allowed Messrs. LILIENDAHL and HAGENSIE to arrange their dispute respecting their fireworks as they themselves might best be able.

Celebration at Fairfield, Conn.—Speech of the Rev. Dr. Osgood, of New-York.

From the Bridgeport Advertiser.

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held in Fairfield on Thursday evening, August 12, in honor of the laying of the great Cable that now binds together the two hemispheres. The festivities began early with the ringing of bells and the firing of cannon. A spacious platform had been erected in front of the Fairfield House, so as to command the beautiful square, which was brilliantly illuminated with bonfires. The building was thronged with a genial company of ladies and gentlemen, and the street and square were all alive with the eager assembly.

JOHN H. GLOVER called the meeting to order, and nominated for President of this meeting Colonel ROSSAR C. WARREN, which was confirmed by acclamation, when the following gentlemen were elected Vice-Presidents: John Gould, Esq., Wm. R. Talbot, Esq., Henry M. Smith, Esq., Henry J. Beers, Esq., Dr. J. T. Dennison, Wm. S. Smith, Esq., and Frederick L. DeForest, Charles H. Isham, Secretaries.

On taking the Chair, Col. WARREN stated the object and importance of the meeting, in a few stirring words, and called upon the Rev. Mr. MCLEAN, of the Congregational Church, to invoke the Divine blessing upon the occasion. After an eloquent and very appropriate prayer, Dr. OSGOOD, of New-York, who spends his Summers in Fairfield, was then introduced, and spoke at some length upon the momentous bearings of the new communication between the Old and the New Worlds, he began by drawing a picture of Fairfield as it was seventy-nine years ago, when it was invaded by British troops, under Gov. TRYON. Eighty-five houses, two churches, fifteen stores and fifteen workshops, were burned to the ground, and the British name was a curse in the mouth of every man, woman and child. He contrasted that Summer of 1779 with this Summer of 1858, and the joy at the approach of British intercourse now with the aversion to everything British then. He then went to speak of the influence of the Great Telegraph, in the first place, as a triumph of man over nature, or mind over matter; then as a new step in the alliance between man and man; and, last of all, as a conscious movement towards the fulfillment of the Divine plans for the union of the whole human race under the mighty laws of mutual industry, active brotherhood and religious faith. He gave various illustrations of his points, both grave and humorous, and made friendly reference to the powers of the Old World and the New. His reference to Ireland drew hearty cheers, and his closing sentiment to the health of Queen VICTORIA, and peace between the United States and Great Britain, America and Europe, was answered by hurrahs from the crowd, and "God save the Queen" from a select choir, who were led by Mr. J. C. NICHOLS. In speaking of Old and New England he said that the two peoples were in some respects alike. They think pretty well of themselves, and so do we. They moreover are under petticoat government, and so are we. There one Queen is on the throne, while we have one to every household, and we have learned, like the English, to settle down very quietly under our bonds. Great is the power of the petticoat, and its shadow is not at present likely to be less.

After the national anthem of England, "God save the Queen," had been sung by the choir, the Chairman introduced to the meeting Mr. BUNCH, H. B. M. Consul for the States of North and South Carolina, who replied to the sentiment of the Rev. Dr OSGOOD in substance as follows: He stated that he had become so accustomed, during a residence of nearly ten years in the United States, to hear sentiments in honor of his Sovereign proposed by Americans and received by American with a cordiality scarcely inferior to that which would have characterized Englishmen under similar circumstances, that he could scarcely say that the present demonstration had taken him by surprise, or that it appeared to him as at all unusual. Nay, he would go a step farther, and add that it had never been a matter of surprise to him that the name of the Queen should be greeted by Americans, since there was no gentleman, wherever born or whatever his political creed, who did not owe allegiance to the virtues and graces that centre in a perfect woman, or who did not feel that he could reconcile the purest devotion to his own country with an affectionate regard for one who, in all the private relations of life, as daughter, wife or mother, had given a bright example to her sex and to the world. This fact alone, he said, would suffice to account for the respect and love the Queen entertained by the great body of the American people. He considered, however, that that there was another and a still more powerful reason for this regard and respect to be found in the reflection that the Queen of England was the recognized Ruler and Representative of a great and kindred people, from whom the hearers were themselves for the most part descended, and to whom they were bound by the nearest and dearest ties. He then proceeded to expatiate at some length upon the manifold advantages to be derived from that close alliance and zealous cooperation between the Governments and peoples of England and America, which were amongst the unmistakable signs of the times, and which were so essential to the carrying on of the great work of spreading the gospel, extending commerce, and promoting civilization, which could only be effected by two such great and powerful nations. That such an alliance was a natural one no one could doubt; as well might you seek to stem with a handful of rushes the course of some noble river hurrying its impetuous waters to the ocean, as to prevent two peoples, united upon all the great doctrines of human progress, from blending into one harmonious whole their destiny and their [illegible]. This was a current which no rocks of prejudice or shoals of jealousy could withstand; it must flow on for ever. Mr. BUNCH proceeded to assure his hearers of the cordial respect and affection with which the United States were regarded in England by all classes of society, and of the good wishes which accompanied their onward course. He considered that all such feelings would be greatly enhanced and improved by the great event which they were met to celebrate; he then explained shortly the construction and component parts of the electric cable, and drew from these last a lesson for the guidance of his hearers in their relations with the mother country; he thought that like its gutta percha they should be ready to bend and yield reciprocally whenever differences of opinion might happen to arise, as must necessarily be the case occasionally between nations meeting at so many points of contact; that like its wire, they should ever be ready to receive and to convey from one to the other the electric flashes of courtesy and good-will; and that like its solid encasing steel, they should sink the great chain of international comity deep into the bottom of their hearts. After drawing a sketch of the probable fate of any solitary Englishman who might have happened to present himself eighty years ago upon the same spot where he then stood, calling upon the then residents of Fairfield to join him in marks of deference and of loyalty towards the sovereign of England, and contrasting it with the security which he himself enjoyed, and the enthusiastic welcome with which he was greeted as an official representative of that sovereign, Mr. BUNCH concluded by a tribute to the eminent qualities and virtues of the President of the United States, who, he said, was almost as well known in England as he was in America, and proposed that the meeting should receive his name with every honor, which was at once done in the most satisfactory manner.

After the enthusiastic cheers that were called out by this sentiment, the choir sung "Hail Columbia," with excellent effect. Cheers were then given for the speakers, CYRUS W. FIELD, Capt. HINSON, ROSSA COOKES, Prof. MONAN, Col. WARREN, and the ladies.

During Mr. BUNCH's speech, a large delegation, with torches and music, marched in from Southport, and took their stand among the auditors.

"ATTEMPTED EXTORTION."—Mr. Hiram P. Hortes, of Washington Market, desires us to state that he is not the person alluded to in the paragraph published under the above heading yesterday, with the name of Hortes in it, but that some other person, with the name of Hortes, is in the habit of attempting, from time to time, to extort money from the Directors, and other persons connected with the Telegraph Company. [illegible] Staunton, Va., Friday, Aug. 13, 1856.

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association, which had been in session here for the past three days, adjourned last evening. Notwithstanding this town is yet in its infancy, not ten years having passed since it was in the woods, and its location in one corner of the State, and that corner not of easy access from other sections until the recently-opened railroad penetrated it, the attendance has been one of the largest held since the organization of the Association. This may be accounted for, in part, by the deep interest taken in the cause of education in this region.

Susquehanna County, lying north of this, had a delegation of 150 teachers here. During the past year, Professor J. F. STODDARD has been engaged in that county as Principal of a Normal School for the training of teachers. This county, Luzerne, is also wide awake, as her new and noble school-houses will testify. One was recently built here at an expense of $40,000; and yesterday another, which cost $6,000, was dedicated. The State Superintendent—Hon. H. C. HICKOK—and other distinguished educators, who have been in attendance upon this Convention, participated in the exercises.

This section of the State is not alone in its deep interest in common schools; other localities are doing as much, and some even more, toward giving the children a sound and practical education. Pennsylvania, slow though she is to start, has engaged in earnest in this noble cause. Her system is most admirably adapted to the wants of her peculiar citizens, and shows the wisdom of the framers of her present code of school laws.

First, she has Free Schools, supported by taxation. Then the inhabitants of each township choose six School Directors, who receive no pay for their services, except the remuneration that good schools bring to their children. These Directors employ all the teachers for the schools of their township, build the school-houses, &c. The Directors of the several townships of the county choose a Superintendent of Schools for the county. He must be a practical teacher. This officer examines the teachers, grants certificates, without which the Directors have not the liberty to employ a person to take charge of any school—he also visits schools and counsels with teachers and parents relative to their improvement. Over all is the State Superintendent, who is appointed by the Governor.

As provisions for securing faithfulness in these several offices, the Judges may remove, for a cause, the School Directors, and fill their vacancies; the State Superintendent may remove the County Superintendent, and fill vacancies. These removals are made from willful neglect of duty, or incompetency. As the system becomes more known, it is better appreciated. Even in the German districts, where a few years ago the people would not sustain their schools by sending their children, they are now liberal in their support and the liberality of the Pennsylvanians, when fairly enlisted in a good cause, is not parsimonious.

Though a resident of the Empire State, where we try to be proud of our School system, I am happy to give such testimony of the progress of the cause of Education in the old Keystone, from personal observations.

Knowing, as I did, the interest that the people at large are taking in their schools, I was prepared to meet a large number of teachers here; for when the parents are alive to the welfare of their schools, teachers become active in efforts to improve themselves.

The Association was called to order by the President—Mr. J. P. STODDARD, of Montrose—at 10½ o'clock A. M., on Tuesday. The Hon. GEO. SANDERSON tendered a cordial welcome to the teachers, in behalf of the citizens of Scranton. Seldom has it been our good fortune to attend a Teachers' Association, in any State, where so ample arrangements were made for the accommodation of the members. Surely no one who came here has cause to regret that this meeting of the Association was held in Scranton.

The first subject taken up for discussion was "The Defects in our Schools." The remarks took a wide range, for the field is a large one, yet many practical thoughts were elicited. After the debate, came an address from Mr. C. T. LEWIS, of Chester County, on the importance of greater attention to the study of history in our Common Schools. Some of the remarks of the speaker appeared quite radical at first view, but a more careful consideration of them showed that he had given much attention to his subject, and treated it with a master's hand. He was not in favor of teaching history from books, as it is written with all the details of wars, &c., but to take it up by subjects, and trace each subject and chain of events through by itself, giving more importance to the effects of events upon nations and individuals in our own time, and less to the details of battles, the successes and failures of armies. His plan is first to awaken a desire to read history, by talking to children of the interesting events recorded in it, and then show them how and where to learn more about the same events. We could but wish that our teachers were as well qualified as Mr. LEWIS to teach this important branch, that our young men might grow up with a better knowledge of even the history of our own country.

The evening session was opened by an address from the State Superintendent, in which he showed that the present School system is working radical changes in public sentiment in regard to popular education. Even in Berks County, where the old German farmer said, "that they had but two religious sects—the Lutherans and the Democrats," they are fast learning that Gen. JACKSON is dead, and that they had better vote for some one else.

This address was followed with a report on mathematical study, by Mr. C. R. CORNER, of Bradford County. The Pennsylvanians are proverbial for giving "cyphering" a prominent place in School studies, hence that part of the report which dwelt upon the importance of the subject seemed less appropriate than the practical suggestions which it contained, of methods for training classes in elementary mathematics. He made some very curious statements about the powers of numbers, and the accumulation of money at compound interest. One was, that had the contribution which the poor widow made of two mites, in the time of our Saviour's ministry upon the earth been put at interest at six per cent. per annum, and continued until the present time, the sum of money thus accumulated would require a solid globe of gold, many times larger than the earth, to represent it. I did not attempt to prove the calculation!

On Wednesday much of the morning session was occupied with a discussion relative to the power of the County Superintendent to annul teachers' certificates. The teachers did not complain so much that this power had been abused, but that it might be, hence it ought to be restricted. After an eloquent and practical speech by the State Superintendent relative to this subject, in which he showed the dangers of tampering with the present admirable working of the system, the question was laid upon the table.

After an address by Mr. MATTHEWS, the President of the Luzerne County Teachers' Association, in which he gave an account of the recent progress in educational matters in this county, and welcomed, in behalf of that Association, their guests on this occasion, Mr. N. A. CALKINS, of New-York, was called, who gave an address on Elementary Instruction. He contrasted the methods which tend to suppress thoughts in the mind of the child with those that develop them, and awaken an interest in learning. The address contained many practical suggestions, and was listened to with much interest.

In the afternoon the election of officers took place. Dr. FRANKLIN TAYLOR, of Chester County, was chosen President for the ensuing year, and the place of the next annual meeting fixed at West Chester, Penn.

In the evening the hours were devoted to listening to the inaugural address of the President of the Association, J. P. Stoddard. He gave a history of the Association, its about five years old—and of the leading educational movements in the State, [illegible] the difficulties that had to be encountered, and the progress made to the close. The address was [illegible] and contained many practical suggestions, (especially where there [illegible]

JACKSON is dead, and that they had better vote for some one else.

This address was followed with a report on mathematical study, by Mr. C. R. CORNER, of Bradford County. The Pennsylvanians are proverbial for giving "cyphering" a prominent place in School studies, hence that part of the report which dwelt upon the importance of the subject seemed less appropriate than the practical suggestions which it contained, of methods for training classes in elementary mathematics. He made some very curious statements about the powers of numbers, and the accumulation of money at compound interest. One was, that had the contribution which the poor widow made of two mites, in the time of our Saviour's ministry upon the earth been put at interest at six per cent. per annum, and continued until the present time, the sum of money thus accumulated would require a solid globe of gold, many times larger than the earth, to represent it. I did not attempt to prove the calculation!

On Wednesday much of the morning session was occupied with a discussion relative to the power of the County Superintendent to annul teachers' certificates. The teachers did not complain so much that this power had been abused, but that it might be, hence it ought to be restricted. After an eloquent and practical speech by the State Superintendent relative to this subject, in which he showed the dangers of tampering with the present admirable working of the system, the question was laid upon the table.

After an address by Mr. MATTHEWS, the President of the Luzerne County Teachers' Association, in which he gave an account of the recent progress in educational matters in this county, and welcomed, in behalf of that Association, their guests on this occasion, Mr. N. A. CALKINS, of New-York, was called, who gave an address on Elementary Instruction. He contrasted the methods which tend to suppress thoughts in the mind of the child with those that develop them, and awaken an interest in learning. The address contained many practical suggestions, and was listened to with much interest.

In the afternoon the election of officers took place. Dr. FRANKLIN TAYLOR, of Chester County, was chosen President for the ensuing year, and the place of the next annual meeting fixed at West Chester, Penn.

In the evening the hours were devoted to listening to the inaugural address of the President of the Association, J. P. Stoddard. He gave a history of the Association, its about five years old—and of the leading educational movements in the State, [illegible] the difficulties that had to be encountered, and the progress made to the close. The morning session of yesterday was chiefly occupied with reports of Committees, &c. In the afternoon, the Association adjourned to attend the dedication of the new School-house.

When I commenced this letter it was my intention to say more of the almost-a city of Scranton—it has about 6,000 inhabitants—of her coal mines, underground railroads, extensive iron-works, the mighty engines of her blast furnaces, three of 1,200 horse power each, with 36-foot beams, each of 22 tons in weight, with balance wheel of 27 feet in diameter, and 25 tons in weight—of her beautiful residences, and enterprising inhabitants, who, I am informed, read the TIMES and Tribune and don't take the Herald—but my letter is long enough.

Commencement at Waterville College, Maine—Convention of the Zeta Psi Fraternity.

WATERVILLE, Me., Thursday, Aug. 12, 1856.

The great event in this part of Maine just at present is the Commencement at Waterville College. Waterville is a beautiful town of some four or five thousand inhabitants, on the Kennebec River, and many New-Yorkers seem to have found out its beauties, and have become "seized and possessed" of rooms and seats at the table of the "Elmwood."

Owing to the interest of the Commencement week, the different railroads from Portland and Bangor have reduced their fares, and are consequently overloaded with passengers, among whom I noticed, last evening, Governor MORRILL, Senator HAMLIN, General WEBSTER, and other dignitaries of the State and College.

The Commencement exercises began on Sabbath evening, in the First Baptist Church, by a sermon before the Boardman Missionary Society, by the Rev. J. G. WARREN, D. D., of Boston, and on Tuesday Dr. CHAPIN delivered his Inaugural Address.

The Commencement proper was on Wednesday, and certainly the inhabitants for fifty miles around seemed fully aware of it. From early morning a continual stream of wagons and every description of vehicle poured into the town.

Under these circumstances the house was of course filled to its utmost capacity, and, warm as it was, the audience listened attentively throughout the order of exercises.

Since Monday morning the streets have been filled with light-blue ribbons, and very pretty pins on the left lapels of numerous coats of various colors.

On inquiry we find they are delegates from thirteen different Colleges in the country to meet with their brethren of the Chi chapter of the Zeta Psi, at Waterville College. They are certainly a fine looking set of fellows, and seem to have a mighty love for giving each other the grip. They seem to differ from most societies of a similar nature in their conventions being secret, and having no public exercises.

On Tuesday night, though their proceedings were not public, they were certainly loud and jolly enough at the table of the Elmwood House. They are very glorious over the idea that of the seven honors at Commencement six were taken by their men. Good scholars or bad, we have seen them do little else than smoke cigars and give the grip, which they do most heartily. They have delegates from North Carolina and Michigan Universities, which certainly shows some spirit.

Yesterday was Commencement, and to-day the town is empty again, and matters take their old quiet course.

The Great Troy Depot—The Union House—Excitement on the Arrival of the New York Papers—A New College—Trial of a Steam Plowing Machine.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

TROY, Tuesday, Aug. 10, 1856.

Slightly "used up" by a recent "heated term," in the metropolis, I shook its dust from my feet, turning my face towards Saratoga, and I propose to give your readers some idea of this locality, as seen by a stranger who has been "taken in" a little nearer to Scriptural principles than is generally practiced in the town from which he came.

I got here, not by a "wooden horse," as sundry individuals procured their entrance into olden Troy, but by the "iron horse," which much better suited my purpose. You are landed in a depot, which the Trojans flatter themselves is rather better adapted to railroad business than almost any other in this blessed land. It is a very complete affair, extending over two entire squares and such a ringing of bells, shrieking of whistles rattling of cars, shouting of conductors, wrangling of baggage-men, smashing of trunks, and hurry of passengers, is kept up from "early morn to dewy eve," that it seems "confusion worse confounded." Getting out of this Babel, you are apt to take your way to the Union House, an elegant hotel, nearly opposite, on Albany-street, conducted by EDWARD D. BEACH, Esq., one of the most enterprising citizens of Troy. In justice to the traveling community, it is proper to say, that this house is all which the most fastidious can desire. It is new, clean, and frequented by the élite of the country. To those young bachelors who are roaming from place to place at this time I especially recommend it, for I have noticed an assemblage of beauty within its walls, which has suggested at least to myself, (being after their own order,) rather agreeable views—some of matrimony. As to the more sedate kind of travelers, they will also find everything to their taste.

The arrival of the New York papers is an event over which the urchins of this city rejoice exceedingly. They come by the train reaching here at 11.50, and at this time Albany-street is turned into a racing ground. There are two rival news-agents, each of whom possess a mail wagon, and the test is, which shall first get the papers to the stores in River-street. The wagons are usually accompanied by scores of the ragged young Democracy, who invade the dépôt, some hal an hour before the coming of the train. In the meantime they get up races of short distances, turn sommersets and black each others eyes. They are long and short, fat and thin, fast and slow; they are noisy and filthy; they blaspheme and glory in a fight. When the cars come along the bundles for each of the agencies are thrown out. Two of them are small rolls, and these are immediately seized by a couple of fleet chaps, who dart down the street into the town at a pace which is wonderful. Other boys are stationed at every corner, to whom the bundles are thrown as the runners grow tired, and almost in the "twinkle of an eye," the papers are conveyed to their destination. The wagons follow with the heavy parcels, surrounded by troops of the excited vagabonds. Hundreds collect to see these races, which, as may be supposed, are of the most animated character. I notice that your own TIMES is a leading paper here.

An institution to combine both the College and University is to open here in September, under the auspices of the Methodists. A splendid building has been erected on "Eighth street Hill," overlooking the city, and commanding one of the finest landscapes in the world. The professorships are filled by men of considerable eminence, and the institution promises to make its mark. The other educational establishments of this city are all in a very flourishing condition, and students are here from many distant countries. Cuba and South America, particularly, are well represented.

The first steam machine adapted to plowing purposes which has ever been tried in this State was exhibited some days since a few miles from the city. The machine was taken to the spot over an exceedingly rough and hilly road, but attained a speed of some four miles per hour. It moved over the field selected for the trial at about the same rate, and is calculated to work a half dozen plows at a time. CHARLES MANN, a practical mechanic of Troy, is the inventor, and, while he confesses the machine quite defective at present, is confident that it can be made to operate with entire success. The trial took place in the presence of Committees of the State and County Agricultural Societies.

New vs. Old Insurance Companies.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The insured should know the facts and experiences of the much-abused class called insurance brokers, and they will well and truly judge which would stand the hardest test and go through the safest in a great conflagration. The [illegible] companies judiciously [illegible] smaller [illegible] which [illegible] Southern [illegible] (especially where there [illegible]

[illegible] Custom-House who voted for [illegible] should be removed, commencing with MICHAEL HOFFMAN, Jr. With reference to MICHAEL HOFFMAN, all I have to say is this, that I have known him and his father many years; his father is now dead, consequently there is but one MICHAEL HOFFMAN now living, and therefore there is but one such person as MICHAEL HOFFMAN, Jr., in the Custom-House. MICHAEL HOFFMAN, who is in the Custom-House, and who was there in 1844 under his father, and whose brother is still there, is a Democrat of Herkimer County, an independent one, who knows no cliques and will submit to no dictation, whose conscience directs him in his political path to travel, and whose political footsteps to follow, and for whom to cast his suffrage. He, perhaps, deviated but for a moment, from the strict line of party duty as set down by would-be leaders. But to "err is human, to forgive divine." If Mr. HOFFMAN's sympathies wandered toward the party of Liberty, and his position constrained him to the support of others, why not give him credit, under the circumstances, of more than ordinary political virtue, in still adhering to his party and electing its candidates. I can say, and say it boldly, Mr. MICHAEL HOFFMAN, the present Deputy Collector of the Port of New-York, is a Democrat, who is prepared to vote the Democratic ticket entire; and the same can be said of his brother, PHOCION HOFFMAN, who is Deputy Collector of the Customs at Buffalo, and also of his brother JAMES HOFFMAN, who is Assistant Cashier of the Customs at New-York. I have known these HOFFMANS many years, and their father before them, who was a member of the Legislature and a member of Congress, and who was placed by the Democratic Party in the Navy Office at New-York, in the receipt of a [illegible] salary—some six or eight thousand dollars yearly, with the perquisites—and which he held till the day of his death, and by which he left his family in independent circumstances. Then, why this accusation that MICHAEL HOFFMAN voted for FREMONT, or even ever had the slightest feeling of sympathy with the Black Republican Party? Who can say they ever have heard Mr. HOFFMAN say a word in sympathy with any but the Democratic Party? Who can say that his brother PHOCION, at Buffalo, ever wrote or spoke favorably of the Fremont faction? Who can say that JAMES HOFFMAN ever voted any but the Democratic ticket? If any, speak—for with him have I contended. Let your Washington correspondent hush his talk.

Yours respectfully,

JACOB ROSEBOOM.

P. S.—I should have written you ere this, but have been daily under the impression that a communication would be received from MICHAEL HOFFMAN, contradicting in most explicit language that he ever either voted for FREMONT, or had even the slightest shadow of sympathy with the Black Republican faction. I have, it appears, waited in vain, and therefore am compelled myself as a Democrat of old Herkimer to say what I can in defence of the family of HOFFMANS. I think I can safely assert that your Washington correspondent will receive a note from one of the HOFFMANS in reference to this attack upon MICHAEL's political character in a very few days.

The pressure of business has only prevented a reply ere this.

Singular Freaks of Electricity—Wonderful Escape of a Family.

A. H. COLE, of Newport, Ky., furnishes the Cincinnati Commercial with an interesting account of the freaks of a streak of lightning in his house, during a violent thunder-storm, a few nights ago. We quote:

"He says that during a violent thunder-storm a ball of electric fluid struck the chimney of his residence, and shattered it from cap to base, and likewise split completely the coping of the building. The fluid then dodged down one of the flues and entered the front bed-chamber in the second story, where a servant was making Mr. COLE's two children. It carried with it a cloud of soot and soot from the fireplace, flashed across the room, filling it with a dazzling light, [illegible] the plaster and lathing opposite the fireplace, and made a hole in the wall more than a foot in diameter, but did not go through the lath. There it played about the apartment an instant, like a luminous handwriting all over the walls, with the casings, sills and frames of the windows, paralyzed the nurse and the children, who were almost buried in dust and soot; struck back to the fireplace through which it had intruded; darted down the chimney, and very unceremoniously introduced itself into the parlor, and played some of the most extravagant capers ever charged against the credit of electricity. It first struck the fender before the fireplace, and irradiated the apartment with fiery and blinding brilliance; glanced to the centre of the parlor, where Mrs. COLE sat entertaining the lady of Colonel HALLAM, and struck an iron spittoon between them; left a blue streak on the top of it; scorched Mrs. H's garments and shocked both ladies. But here the ball of fluid separated, one current flashing to the right and the other to the left; the first enjoying itself by knocking the plastering from the wall, splitting the casings and frames of the windows, through which it disappeared; the other striking the open doors between the parlor and the dining-room, which it completely shattered; then dashed through the closed blinds of the dining-room, which it also splintered. Thence it glanced to the pavement which surrounded the cistern in the yard, and after tearing up four or five bricks and scattering the sand about ubiquitously, it disappeared through the pipe which leads into the cistern, perforating the pipe completely, leaving a hole about the diameter of the largest sized buck shot.

It is superfluous to say that the ladies, as well as the nurse and children—who were the only inmates of the tenement—were more alarmed than electrified. They were blinded by the startling brilliance of the fluid, and the nurse and children were heavily charged with electricity, besides being almost buried in soot, ashes and dust. The phenomenon was scarce more more than visible and sensible before it was gone. It was literally quick as a 'flash.' The fluid sped down the chimney and through each apartment like a cannon ball glowing with white heat. The children—both under two years of age—seemed 'charged' fully fifteen minutes, being completely stupefied. The ladies were affected but momentarily, and the nurse became conscious of something astonishing which had taken place within five minutes from the visitation of the intruder. The bed-chamber, parlor and dining-room—Mr. COLE says, and we can well imagine it—present a very shattered aspect. The walls in the two former rooms seem to have been subjected to a pelverizing bombardment, the artillery of heaven having left the big imprint of its charge wherever it struck."

FELL INTO A WELL.—During the laying of the corner-stone of the Catholic Cathedral, a resident of Siberian, unmindful of where he was going, stepped into a well which had been dug and covered. He gave a shriek, and [illegible] the next thing that was seen of the unfortunate man was his head [illegible] above the water to the [illegible] Fortunately, he was a good swimmer, and was able to keep himself afloat until he was drawn out. He was not much injured by his fall, but part of his hair in double quick time.

Catching a Post-Office Robber—Discovery of Extensive Thefts.

The Chicago Press and Tribune has the following: "For some time past, indeed, it may almost be said for all time past since our Post-Office attained anything like its present magnitude as a receiving and distributing office, numerous and frequent complaints have been made of the loss of letters of value, or of friendship, which failed to reach those to whom they were addressed, to the loss or the disappointment of the proper recipients. Under this circumstance it has come to pass that much vigilance has from time to time been exercised, and all the skill of our detectives been brought to bear upon the same, to the effect already of several convictions of divers parties both without and within the Post-Office Department, several of whom are now in our State Penitentiary. The more common practice in these knaveries from without, is the calling for letters belonging to business firms by persons unauthorized to receive them. We believe every precaution has been taken to guard against such deception, and the instructions to the clerks and other employes of the Post-Office are of the strictest character.

In addition to these a system of insuring checks to box owners, bearing a number corresponding with the box, has been adopted, and the rule generally adhered to, of demanding in all cases, where the identification was not perfect, the presentation of the check at the delivery window. Nevertheless these depredations have prevailed, and recently to an extent that called out new exertions to detect, if possible, the party or parties. The case was given to CYRUS P. BRADLEY, the noted detective officer of this city, and he has for some time past been studying up the points, and with such success that, yesterday morning, a young man, a German, named BERNO BENJAMIN, formerly an agent for the Union and National Democrat, was arrested upon the charge of robbing the Post-Office. He was first "spotted" by a delivery clerk named I. J. HOWARD, who observed him opening letters from different boxes during the day. HOWARD called the attention of C. B. SMITH, another clerk, to the fellow. The two then gave information to Capt. BRADLEY of the matter, and he put a man on the scent.

A decoy letter was placed in PARSONS & FARLIN'S box, which he had been robbing, and yesterday he called for it. He was informed that it belonged in another box, (the letter being placed in it merely to "spot" him.) He was then traced to the Franklin House. Captain BRADLEY at once set a guard around the house, and took every measure to detect him. On Tuesday morning he got a letter out of PARSONS & FARLIN'S box, containing a draft, drawn in their favor, on B. W. PHILLIPS banker. He went back to the Franklin House, where he boarded, called for a pen and ink, and went up to his room, where it is supposed he indorsed it. He presented it for payment, but it was at once detected as a forgery, and he bolted, leaving the draft. Previous to presenting the draft he tore up the letters in his room, and threw them out of the window. A remnant of one, directed to MICHAEL BOYLE, was found underneath the window. Yesterday morning a warrant was got out for him by Commissioner MAGILL, and he was arrested. He is known to have robbed five boxes, Parsons & Farlin's, Michael Doyle's, G. Pottgiesser's, Nathan Jackson's and A. C. Oertel's. The evidence in most of these cases seems to be limited only by the patience and skill of the officers in restoring, by the "pasting process," the letters themselves from half a peck of finely-torn fragments, picked up in the alley beneath BENJAMIN'S window. It is a task compared to which a Chinese puzzle of the most puzzling order were easy, but it will be done in numerous other cases, sufficient probably to confine the wretched young man to the service of the State for a century, if the law be inforced to its full extent.

BENJAMIN is a German, whose parents still reside in Germany. He is a young man of about twenty-five, with nothing in his countenance, which seems frank and open, to second any suspicion of such a crime.

He had upon his person when arrested the following professional card: "B. BENJAMIN, agent for the National Union and National Democrat, Chicago, Illinois." He was brought before the United States Commissioners, J. MAGILL and P. A. HOLME, in Larmon Block, by whom a hearing was held, United States District-Attorney FITCH representing the prosecution.

The cases yet made out against BENJAMIN are five in number, for each of which he has been held to bail.

Jared Sparks Relates his Experience in Europe.

At the recent meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society, the President called upon Mr. JARED SPARKS, who made an interesting relation of things he had seen abroad. At Florence he found valuable papers relating to VESPUCIUS, which he ordered to be copied and should present to the Society for publication. The members of the family, who, though not opulent, are in good circumstances, informed him, that some years they parted with an original portrait of the great navigator to an American gentleman who avowed that he desired it for an American public institution; and that it had been traced to New-York, but its present place of deposit is not known. It was a matter of deep regret to the family that this original is not in our national halls. Copies of it represented the same melancholy face, with a map in the hand, which is seen in this country.

Mr. SPARKS then spoke at some length of the British State Paper Office, where there was an invaluable collection of materials relating to Massachusetts, copies of which ought to be taken. Here Mr. SPARKS alluded to the liberality of New-York as to its documentary history, and suggested that Massachusetts ought to follow her example. Especially, too, at this time, when the rule of the British Government, as to allowing copies to be taken, was remarkably liberal. He found no difficulty in getting almost anything he wanted. Even the private and curious diplomatic correspondence of Lord STORMONT, who was on the Continent in 1775-'76-'77, was freely thrown open to him. The rule simply required that the matter copied should be bound and submitted to a responsible officer. It was held that no public policy now required concealment, and it was time to bury up all feuds. Mr. SPARKS found Holland, also, very liberal; but France less so. Mr. SPARKS, in conclusion, spoke of our national reputation abroad.

On the Continent, and especially in Paris, he judged the reputation of the United States was bad; and he remarked, at length, on the dissociation of the Paris Press and of monarchists generally, in roughly against us such things as our quarrels, mobs, duels and political troubles. There were two classes of minds, the Monarchical and the Red [illegible] the United States—the latter think our Government is bad because the people have no liberty, and the Democratic circle dislike us because we are a Republic. In England the tone of opinion was widely different. He found there was a profound respect for the United States. It was considered a nation worthy to be conciliated, worthy of closer ties with England, and looked to as an ally in the future great contests with absolutism. Reverting to Paris, Mr. SPARKS said that occasionally a favorable account was seen in the papers, and he instanced as an exception a publication by Baron CHARLES DUPIN of a paper read to the Academy of Sciences, and printed in the Moniteur of March 2, 1858. This had the following allusion to Massachusetts:

"At the West of the Atlantic, Massachusetts, small by territory, comparatively less fertile than the basins of the Mississippi, of the La Plata, of the Amazon, is made great by agriculture, and above all, by industry. It takes the lead in science and arts among the one hundred and twenty States of the New-World. To its too limited territory it adds two oceans; towards the polar circles, to attack the great cetacia, it sends more seamen than all other nations put together. It seeks even in Asia the treasures of the Equator, and the aromas, the priceless perfumes of the torrid zone, it pays for with the ice of its lakes. To turn its running waters to a course more astonishing, it transforms its cataracts into rapids, into regular motive powers, rivals of steam. It is not enough for this State to create its Cambridge Alma, to push further out the boundaries of science and add even stars to its constellations. It founds at once its Manchester, its Birmingham, its Leeds, and its Halifax. During the half century which continues the one we describe, it prepares against the colossus of British industry, a giant's wrath. The struggle has begun. New-England cannot hesitate in the decisive war of independence and triumph, will be the independence of north America. [illegible]

The Administration Organ on the Result in Kansas.

From the Washington Union, 14th.

In speaking a few days since of the recent vote in Kansas, we said that "the vexed question of Slavery had little or nothing to do with the result." The Mammoth Musical Festival.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of yesterday you make some reflections on the probable motives of "some of the German singing clubs" for not taking part in the above Festival, showing that you are wrongly informed, and as a member of one of the societies condemned as "either afraid of competition, or actuated by still meaner motives," I take the liberty to address a few lines to you on the subject.

The object of all similar German Festivals held heretofore in this City, has been to bring together the members of a society, or of a number of kindred societies, for the purpose of musical enjoyment, and any surplus receipts have invariably been employed either for charitable or generally beneficial purposes.

The Musical Festival held in June last originated in the desire of the instrumental performers of this City to have a grand celebration of their own in imitation of, and if possible surpassing, the very successful Double Festival held a short time previously by the German singing societies.

As the net proceeds of the affair were in advance destined for a charitable purpose, the German singing societies readily accepted the invitation extended to them, of cooperating in the concerts and participating in the pic-nic to be arranged; but they, as well as most of the instrumental performers, were very much disappointed when they learned how small a proportion only of the immense receipts were ultimately applied to charity.

I am not prepared to say that this unsatisfactory result was owing to anything worse than bad management, but the effect of it was, that when the proposition for a so-called Mammoth Festival was arranged by parties connected with the former affair it found no favor with the German Societies, for, let him so, when it turned out that it was [illegible] a strictly business speculation by the [illegible] of Jonas Wood, and his associates, with [illegible] but the making of money.

Supposing, for speculator should deem it profitable, he arrange a similar festival every week, what claim would he have on the German Societies for their cooperation? If they felt no inclination to join him and where, then, lies the meanness attributed to us for not taking part in the "Mammoth Festival," which was not popular amongst us?

Besides, there is such a thing as "overdoing a thing," and you cannot blame us for not wishing to make an every-day affair what we have been in the habit of regarding an extraordinary enjoyment, occurring perhaps, once or twice a year, while we have assisted on three similar occasions already this Summer, and have long since pledged ourselves for taking part in a grand festival, to be held in a few weeks, for the benefit of the German Hospital Fund. As for our fear of competition, I can easily settle that question, by stating that, when the managers of the mammoth affair found that no German society would compete for the prize offered, they engaged all the chorus singers of the two last opera companies, and hastily formed them into four sham societies, who had to compete for the prize, (or lose their prospect for a second engagement,) and you may imagine how hard they struggled for the honor, when I assure you, which I knew several days before the trial, which Society was intended to win the prize, and to whom they would have to return the same after the falling of the curtain. Believing you, Sir, to be impartial in this matter, I respectfully submit the above to you, and trust you will please either publish the whole of it, or give to your readers such extracts therefrom as will prove us to have been "actuated neither by fear of competition nor by any still meaner motive in not lending our aid" to the "Mammoth Musical Festival."

Truly yours,

A SINGER FROM INCLINATION.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term, Tompkins, J.

Before Judge Clerke.

In re Augustus Limberger, on writ of Habeas Corpus.—In this case Mr. Lemuel Shaw had sued out a writ of habeas corpus addressed to Colonel Harris, the commandant of the Marine Barracks at Brooklyn, claiming his discharge from the service of the United States. The writ was returnable this morning. It then appeared that Limberger had enlisted as a marine about three years since, and that he produced to the inspecting officer a man who said he was the father of the recruit, and signed the necessary papers for the boy to serve five years. Shortly after this the boy went to sea in the Constitution, and was absent two years. He then caused the writ of habeas corpus to be issued to obtain his discharge as a minor. On being told that if he persisted in the suit he would lose his pay, the proceedings were abandoned, and the boy returned to his duty until pay day came round, when having received his pay, the present writ was obtained and made returnable this morning. The Judge, on hearing the facts, said he was of opinion that the boy had ratified the contract, and that he must serve out his term of five years from the date of his enlistment. The writ was discharged.

In re Stephen Peacock, convicted of Libel.—On the application of Mr. Ashmead, a writ of error was granted in this case and made returnable on Monday next.

Order.—No orders to show cause will be granted, unless in case of necessity, until the order of the Court.

Before Charles Sturt, Esq., Referee.

William Fernandez, an infant, vs. Charles MacCoy.—Mr. W. F. Howe, who appeared as counsel for the plaintiff, stated to his Honor, the Referee, that the plaintiff in this suit was an infant under the age of 14 years, and that the defendant was the proprietor of the "Atlantic Pleasure Gardens," situated in Broadway in this City, and that this suit was instituted to recover damages, which were laid at $5,000 for injuries sustained by the plaintiff under the following circumstances: On the 15th July last, the plaintiff was in the Atlantic Gardens and was playing therein, when a large and ponderous wooden screen which was placed across the entrance of the Gardens to keep those inside from the gaze of those without, being negligently and carelessly by the defendant left standing upright in the said Gardens, without proper support or fastening, fell upon the plaintiff and broke his right thigh, and inflicted on him other injuries of a severe character. The sufferer was immediately conveyed to the City Hospital, where the fractured limb was set; and, owing to such injuries, the child is now confined to his bed, in one of the wards of the Hospital. The defendant had been duly served with the summons and complaint in this action, but had not thought proper to put in any answer thereto; whereupon Mr. Justice Clerke, of the Supreme Court, ordered the present reference to assess the plaintiff's damages. Mr. Howe observed that, by the defendant's default, the facts would be taken as admitted, and he should, therefore, produce the medical evidence necessary for the estimation of the plaintiff's damages.

Dr. George Strong being sworn, testified as follows: On the 15th July last I was resident surgeon at the New-York Hospital; I attended the plaintiff on his admission to the Hospital on that day; he had a broken thigh bone which I set, and to which I applied the usual medical treatment; the child must have been in great pain, but the fracture was not severe; he will be able to leave the Hospital in about a month's time, to the best of my judgment.

Mary Fernandez, the mother of the plaintiff, then deposed to taking the plaintiff to the Hospital, on his receiving the injuries in the Atlantic Gardens; and that she was a poor washerwoman, and that the plaintiff would have to get his livelihood by hard work.

Mr. Howe then addressed the Referee, and said, although upon this evidence he could not ask for anything approaching the damages laid in the complaint, yet, considering the plaintiff, from his station in life, was dependent on those limbs which God had given him for his support; and by this accident (occasioned by defendant's negligence) had most certainly had one of those limbs injured, or at all events weakened for life, he would submit that the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages, due consideration being had for the sufferings he had undergone.

His Honor, the Referee, said he was constrained to say the plaintiff was of too young an age to have been trusted, without a proper guardian, in such a place as the Atlantic Gardens; but, as the defendant had not denied the allegations in the complaint, and taking into consideration the medical testimony, he thought $300 would be an equitable sum between all parties.

Award for plaintiff of $300 and costs.

SUPERIOR COURT—Special Term.—Aug. 16.

Before Judge Barworth.

Wilson vs. Deroe.—In this case the plaintiff got a verdict and judgment in November, 1854, which was reversed in 1856 with costs to abide the event, and the cause was again tried before the court in April, 1857, and decided in the following July in favor of the plaintiff. The adjustment of costs made by the clerk was overruled, the Judge holding that the whole costs are to be taxed at the rate prescribed by the act of 1837, which went into effect in May, 1857. Held, also, that the plaintiff might have a term fee for each circuit, and for each special term, and for each general term, not exceeding three for each of such terms, and as many trial fees as there were actual trials, and the fee of $10 for proceedings before notice of each actual trial, and of $10 for proceedings subsequent to notice of each actual trial, and his costs of the appeal, the latter to be adjusted at the rates prescribed by the act of 1857.

Fry vs. Bennett.—Form of judgment of the General Term settled.

Boughton vs. Dodge et al.—Bill of exceptions settled, and left with the Special Term Clerk.

Before Judge Pierpont.

Peter P. Demarest vs. Harlem Railroad Co.—Motion denied without costs.

Edward James vs. A. T. Edgerton.—Motion denied. No costs to either party.

HARVEST PROSPECTS.

We continue to-day the publication of condensed extracts of letters received at the Commercial Agency of Messrs. McKillop & Wood, No. 5 Beekman-street (in the Park Bank Building.) These extracts are prepared exclusively for the Times. It should be stated that these accounts are from intelligent observers, who are not interested in selling produce, and who only allude to the state of the crops for the purpose of showing the general business prospects in their several localities.

OHIO.

Chardon, Geauga County.—We anticipate a half-crop of Corn. The prospects now are fair for Barley and Oats.

Ravenna, Portage County.—The products are chiefly Wheat, Corn, Oats, Wool, &c. The prospects now are good for each of these crops. Wheat is perhaps rather below an average.

Canton, Stark County.—The prospects now are that we will have one half a crop of Wheat. Corn is good. Oats and Rye an average.

MISSISSIPPI.

Vicksburg, Warren County.—The prospects for Cotton and Corn are very flattering in all the counties back from the Overflow.

Talbula, Issaquena County.—Cotton and Corn are the staples. The prospects now are very bad—both crops ruined by the high waters. This County almost all overflowed.

GEORGIA.

Marietta, Cobb County.—The chief products are Cotton, Corn, Wheat and Oats. The prospects now are very flattering, though the drought has injured the crops somewhat. Wheat and Oats have suffered from rust, and the yield will not be so good as usual.

Fort Gaines, Clay County.—The prospects for Corn and Cotton are very good.

Vienna, Dooly County.—The crops here are fine. Cotton has commenced opening, and bids fair for a fine yield. The Corn crop is made, and is abundantly large.

Talbeton, Talbot County.—The prospects are very good for Corn and Cotton.

Albany Lumber Market, for the Week Ending August 14.

From the Albany Statesman.

Receipts for the week have not been large, but the supply is abundant, and all kinds can now be found in market.

Sales during the week have been fair. The market has been enlivened by several Eastern buyers, one of whom takes about half a million feet. Lumber being in large supply, freights low, and prices having touched their lowest figure for the season, in the opinion of dealers, renders the present time the most favorable for purchasing stock which will occur this year.

Prices have been well maintained, offers at lower figures have been declined, and the tendency of the market is favorable to a rise rather than fall.

The receipts of Lumber by Canal at Albany, for the week ending Aug. 7, for the years 1854 to 1858, inclusive, are:

	Boards and Scantling, ft.	Shingles, M.	Timber, Cubic ft.	Staves, No.
1854	11,698,000	569	—	4,174,100
1855	9,278,500	320	—	5,975,400
1856	8,700,660	704	—	6,292,000
1857	9,107,400	1,705	1,800	9,924,000
1858	7,694,400	755	—	3,551,100

The receipts at Albany for the years above named, during the season to Aug. 8, are:

	Boards and Scantling, ft.	Shingles, M.	Timber, Cubic ft.	Staves, No.
1854	161,846,500	16,022	12,115	49,222,800
1855	107,700,600	20,447	2,880	65,054,500
1856	104,243,500	20,492	7,610	87,036,600
1857	102,274,800	32,656	12,375	82,242,300
1858	120,089,600	15,555	80,760	65,052,900

The quantity received at tide-water, (which includes what is received at West Troy, New-York, Waterford and Albany,) to the 8th of Aug. in 1857 and 1858, is as follows:

	1857.	1858.
Boards and Scantling, ft.	185,604,200	225,473,400
Shingles, M	43,225	23,487
Timber, cubic ft.	1,089,932	363,953
Staves, No.	139,441,400	93,043,100

Charleston Rice Market.

In Charleston, during the week ending August 13, there were received and (nearly all) sold, 2,129 tcs.; exported, 1,405 tcs.—1,236 tcs. to New York. The prices realized ranged from $2 75@$3 25; mainly at $2 87½@$3 ⅌ 100 lbs. Remaining on shipboard, not cleared, August 13, 378 tcs. Freights to New York—Rice 75c. ⅌ tierce by sailing vessel, and 87½c.@$1 by propellers and steamers.

PERSONAL.

EMIGRATION TO OCEANICA.—A PROJECT is on foot to establish an Independent American Colony upon unoccupied territory in Central Oceanica. The projector of the Colony has visited this region, which he regards as eminently salubrious in regard to climate, and favorable to the human constitution; and he has carefully matured a plan of emigration and settlement. The [illegible] commercial establishment that is contemplated, will be enabled shortly after its arrival out, to send home a return cargo of many valuable mineral and vegetable staples of commerce; the site for settlement being contiguous to a deep, spacious, landlocked harbor, having coal and ship timber in the immediate vicinity, and favorably situated, must become an important coaling and refitting station for lines of American steamships, now projected to traverse the Pacific and Indian Oceans; it will also be in a position to control a lucrative insular trade with China; and will find ready and convenient markets for its tropical products in the port of Australia. This scheme of emigration and colonization has no connection with any peculiar religious or social organization. However, the projector, whilst [illegible] the important commercial advantages to be [illegible] [illegible] A company is partly formed; [illegible] to join the company, [illegible] probably early in November next. [illegible] length crowned the [illegible] telegraphic communication between [illegible] and the New World. We are enabled [illegible] this morning the Message of [illegible] Queen of England, to President Buchanan [illegible] over the Great Atlantic Telegraph. [illegible] was made yesterday [illegible] succeeded in [illegible] the difficulties which had prevented the [illegible] so devoutly hoped for, and that the [illegible] anxiously wished both ways. This [illegible] created the greatest fever of [illegible] and expectation, which was [illegible] the greeting on the news-[illegible] of a Message from the Directors [illegible] Atlantic Telegraph Company of Great Britain to those of the United States, in advance of the publication of the Message from the Queen. The [illegible] made public until late in the evening. When the anxiety of the waiting crowds [illegible] relieved. The authenticity of the dispatch was doubted by the President until the signature was verified by the Superintendent [illegible] Bay Station, Mr. MACKAY, who, on [illegible] made to him, testified that it had actually come over the wire from Valentia Bay. On this satisfactory evidence being presented to [illegible] immediately forwarded his reply, but this message will be found elsewhere. The enthusiasm and rejoicing with which the intelligence of the great event was hailed throughout the country last evening, were almost unprecedented.

Up to the time of going to press this morning, the steamer of the United States steam frigate [illegible] will no doubt arrive to-day. We have one week's later news from Europe this morning. The steamer, from Liverpool on the 7th [illegible] Cape Race on Saturday night, the 14th inst., ran foul of the Europa, outward bound, mistaking her lights for those of the Cape. The Europa [illegible] her cut-water and had her stem knocked off, besides receiving other damage, which forced her [illegible] Tuesday, to repair damage. The Europa was towed by the Arabia, which had left Liverpool [illegible], and then proceeded for New-York. The political advices by the Arabia are of no importance. The news of the successful laying of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable had been received, and was hailed with the greatest enthusiasm. The rebellion in Central India is said to be almost [illegible] down. NEWS OF THE DAY.

[illegible] Europe this morning the Message of [illegible] Queen of England, to President Buchanan [illegible] over the Great Atlantic Telegraph [illegible] was made yesterday [illegible] succeeded in [illegible] the difficulties which had prevented the [illegible] so devoutly hoped for, and that the [illegible] anxiously wished both ways. This [illegible] created the greatest fever of [illegible] and expectation, which was [illegible] the greeting on the news-[illegible] of a Message from the Directors [illegible] Atlantic Telegraph Company of Great Britain to those of the United States, in advance of the publication of the Message from the Queen. The [illegible] made public until late in the evening. When the anxiety of the waiting crowds [illegible] relieved. The authenticity of the dispatch was doubted by the President until the signature was verified by the Superintendent [illegible] Bay Station, Mr. MACKAY, who, on [illegible] made to him, testified that it had actually come over the wire from Valentia Bay. On this satisfactory evidence being presented to [illegible] immediately forwarded his reply, but this message will be found elsewhere. The enthusiasm and rejoicing with which the intelligence of the great event was hailed throughout the country last evening, were almost unprecedented.

Up to the time of going to press this morning, the steamer of the United States steam frigate [illegible] will no doubt arrive to-day.

We have one week's later news from Europe this morning. The steamer, from Liverpool on the 7th [illegible] Cape Race on Saturday night, the 14th inst., ran foul of the Europa, outward bound, mistaking her lights for those of the Cape. The Europa [illegible] her cut-water and had her stem knocked off, besides receiving other damage, which forced her [illegible] Tuesday, to repair damage. [illegible] Times.

[illegible] Wednesday, (Cons.) American says:

[illegible] of this city, by his own hand, on Saturday [illegible] of last week, [illegible] fellow-citizens with astonishment, and evoked universal sympathy. He was a useful man, of upright character, a good citizen and father. From some circumstances, he must have made away with himself between 4 and 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon—his wife having left him at home at 4—the last time he was seen by her alive. On her return, an hour later, he was absent, but supposing that he had gone about his usual business at the factory, no alarm was created until late in the evening, when, finding him still absent, she communicated her fears to the neighbors, who instituted an unsuccessful search for his whereabouts. The investigation was pursued the next morning, when, about 8 o'clock, on passing a small brick building near the house, designed for a smoke house, one of those in search thought he saw the shadow of a human form by looking obliquely through the window. On examining the door it was found to be locked inside, the key remaining in the lock. Means were taken to open the door, when a spectacle presented itself too ghastly to relate. Suspended from a rafter there hung the lifeless body—the spirit had departed to Him who gave it.

A Jury of Inquest was immediately summoned by [illegible] Smith, Esq., Willard Spencer, Esq., acting as Coroner. After carefully weighing the circumstances and the evidence, the Jury returned the following verdict:

New Haven County, ss.
Wallingford, August 6, 1858.

The undersigned Jurors, being duly impannelled and sworn to inquire of the cause and manner of the death of William Upson, whose death was sudden and [illegible], and the cause and manner of which was unknown, having viewed the body of said deceased and considered the evidence given to us, do, upon our oaths, say: The said William Upson came to his death by hanging, by his own hand, with a rope—[illegible] aberration; whereof we subscribe our names.

J. C. Bradwell, M. D., foreman, Wm. Brown, L. W. Lee, Charles Parker, Robert K. Brown, L. D. Jones, S. B. Minor, G. E. Hoskins, Charles E. Cook, George W. Walton, E. Turner, Cornelius W. Turner.

We are aware of the delicacy which hangs over such a melancholy transaction, involving as it does the feelings of the surviving relatives. But when he lived standing so fair in the community, of competent means, and occupying an slightly and highly responsible position in one of the largest manufacturing establishments, thus suddenly and voluntarily rushes into the presence of his Maker, apparently without any real cause, we are naturally led to exclaim, "Alas for human nature!" nor are we satisfied to pass over the sad occurrence either lightly or without some effort to fathom the origin of the mystery. In the case before us there is not the least doubt of the entire disengagement of the mental organization of the deceased. Nor was it the thing of to-day, but it had been gradually growing upon him for years, months, and days. Those concerned in business with him, and others of his intimate acquaintance, have long been aware of his occasional indications of mental depression, though not to an alarming extent.

There is a long history connected with this case, but we have neither inclination or room to unveil it here. Suffice it to say, that the modern illusion called "Spiritualism," lays at the foundation of the victim's destruction. He had himself, within the past few months, began to see its fallacy, and informed some of his confidential friends expressing his intention of abandoning it altogether, and had done so to some extent.

A Jersey Diddler at Niagara Falls.

From the Rochester Democrat.

Some days since, a fine-looking and gentlemanly man, tolerably advanced in years, arrived at the International Hotel, Niagara Falls, with a female companion, and put upon the register the name of Dr. H. W. P. Junius and lady," from Lexington, Ky. In short, the Doctor wanted it understood that he was a Southern gentleman, traveling at the North for health and recreation, during the months in which the torrid climate of the sunny south he called his home made a residence there disagreeable. The Doctor flourished at the International exceedingly, and was looked upon as a gentleman of distinction. But a great misfortune presently overtook the Doctor. Just as he and his lady were about to leave for a tour to the East, and a visit in turn at all the fashionable watering-places, some rascal entered his room at the International, and robbed him of all the spare cash he had with him, amounting to $300, all of it in $10 notes. Of course the Doctor was reduced to very great straits, and in his extremity applied to Mr. Osburn, the popular host of the International, for aid. The Doctor had no cash, it is true, but his credit was good, and as he was anxious to carry out the original design of his journey, he would make a draft on a bank at Louisville, Kentucky, for $250, which Mr. Osburn could cash, retaining enough to satisfy the Doctor's bill. To this the obliging landlord assented, but, unfortunately, he was a little short, and in order to purchase the Doctor's draft, it was necessary to give his check for $70 on a Bank in Lockport. The Doctor made no objection, and having received the amount of his $250 draft, including the $70 check, and lose the amount of his bill, departed for Saratoga, with his lady. This was last Saturday, we believe.

So far every thing was as "straight as a string," but it now occurred to Mr. Osburn to telegraph to the Louisville Bank, in order to ascertain how the doctor's account stood. The reply was that no such man was known at the institution, and in due time a dispatch was sent by Mr. Osburn to the bank at Lockport, on which he had drawn his check for $70, not to pay the money. The doctor hadn't been quite smart enough, and it was not till Wednesday that he made his appearance at the counter of the bank and presented the check. He was detained, and intelligence of his arrest sent to Niagara Falls, whence an officer came down on the next train, and escorted the dignity-bitten Southerner to the Falls yesterday morning.

The doctor's lady wasn't with him at Lockport. She had been to Buffalo, it seems, and left her at a hotel there while he went to Lockport to get the check cashed. We are sorry to say that circumstances are strong against the Doctor. Although it is alleged to the officer yesterday that his profession was of Divinity, and not of Medicine, so little respect was shown to his cloth that he was locked up like any common rogue. It was ascertained that, notwithstanding his eminent position in Lexington, he was unable to tell the names of any of the prominent citizens of that place, and some Simon Pure Kentucky gentlemen from that vicinity, who happen to be staying at the Falls just now, were found to be as ignorant of the existence of such a clergyman, and the Rev. Dr. H. W. P. Junius, as he was of his own city. It is much to be feared that the "Reverend" Doctor will have to go to the State Prison unless he can show a cleaner record than he has been able to do so yet.

Relics of the Last Century.

From the Philadelphia Press.

By invitation of a friend, we visited the establishment in Arch-street, to take a look at some old relics of an exceedingly interesting character. The site of the building now used for business is one of the oldest in the city; the original deed, which was shown us, being dated in the year 1737, and the old edifice which originally occupied the spot had never, until recently, passed from the possession of its original owners. It had been occupied as a private dwelling, and was long an object of much interest. The chimney-piece, in the style of many old dwellings, was ornamented with pictured tiles, some twenty-five of which have been carefully preserved in frames, and are now in the counting room of the establishment. They have the mark of "Sadler, Liverpool," and bear date in the beginning of the last century, while as specimens of art, they must, at that period, have ranked high, being fully equal to any of the wood engravings of that era. In style, they would have done no discredit to the pencil of Hogarth or Cruikshank, some of them being more than ordinarily provocative of mirth, and a few rather gross in character for the fastidious taste of the present age. Among the most amusing is a group representing a scene in which a person is on a tour for the collection of his tithes. The farmer is in the act of presenting a pig—the tenth, of course—while the "gude wife," in the same spirit of awarding to him the full share of his dues, is in the act of awarding her tenth baby as tithes to the parson. From the "bairn" the over-fed and pompous-looking parson turns with a scowl of disgust, while for the pig he seems to have a peculiar hankering. A tenth quilting scene; a sea-sawing adventure, in which a mischievous youth has thrown from her balance his teasie, and is eyeing with malicious smile, which passes for commiseration, her recumbent position, and several others are equally interesting.

As a collection, these tiles are decided curiosities, and are most appropriately cherished and preserved. The art of thus drawing upon porcelain is said to be lost, having died with Sadler, the inventor of the process. We remember to have seen, several years since, tiles somewhat similar, in the old Arnold mansion, as it was called, near the banks of the Schuylkill and Point Pleasant; but in artistic finish they were vastly inferior to the specimens of which we now speak. The old Arnold mansion, having been used so frequently for pleasure parties, was shorn of nearly all its ancient adornments, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether there have been any preserved by the proprietor, not only as connecting links between the present and the past, but as samples of an art now unknown.

Strange Proceedings—Murderer Turned Loose.—The Pittsburg Post Press says: "Some of our readers may recollect the cold blooded murder of a Pittsburgher, named Joseph McIntyre, on board the steamer Vicksburg, near Baton Rouge, La., on the 31st of May last, while he was on his way to this city—having been to New-Orleans upon a coal-boat trip. The murderer was a noted outlaw, named Andrew Stone, and so atrocious was the homicide, that it was with difficulty that the officers of the boat could save the passengers from lynching the perpetrator. He was spared summary punishment, and carefully guarded until the boat arrived at Louisville, where he was committed to jail, to await the action of the authorities of Louisiana. From a private letter, addressed to Wm. P. Allison, Esq., of Courtneyville, and written by T. D. Lewis, of Baton Rouge, from Louisville, we learn that Stone has been turned out of jail, and is now at large. Mr. Lewis had obtained a requisition from the Governor of Louisiana, and upon arriving at Louisville, he found it necessary to obtain the signature of the Governor of Kentucky, before he could obtain the custody of the prisoner. On Wednesday, the 4th inst., Lewis visited Frankfort, and obtaining the necessary documents, returned to Louisville and demanded the prisoner. The authorities refused to give Stone up, unless he was identified as the man called for in the requisition. This Lewis was prepared to prove, but the absence of the Judge of the Circuit Court prevented him from so doing. He was assured, however, by the Chief of Police, and Jailor, that Stone would be retained in jail.

On Thursday evening, Mr. Lewis started, with a gentleman, for Grayson Springs, to appear before the Circuit Judge, and prove the prisoner's identity. On Saturday evening, Lewis returned to Louisville, and to his utter astonishment found that Stone had been released. He had been committed for sixty days, but his time was not up until the evening of the day of his release—and he was set at liberty in the morning, upon the demand of his attorney. Mr. Lewis is determined to investigate the matter fully, and ascertain by what authority this heartless murderer has been suffered to go unwhipt of justice. The laws of Kentucky must be stringent indeed if they required the discharge of such an offender at a moment of time when a requisition from another State was fully completed and when a few hours of time would have effected his safe keeping for trial.

Mr. Lewis will have the matter fully investigated, and in the meantime he will use every effort in his power for the arrest of the murderer."

The Dickens Scandal Again.

The following letters are in circulation among the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Dickens. They speak for themselves:

Tavistock House, Tavistock-square,
London, W. E., Tuesday, May 25, 1858.

My Dear Arthur: You have not only my full permission to show this, but I beg you to show it to any one who wishes to do me right, or to any one who may have been misled into doing me wrong.

Faithfully, &c., C. D.

To Arthur Smith, Esq.

Tavistock House, Tavistock-square,
London, W. E., Tuesday, May 25, 1858.

Mrs. Dickens and I have lived unhappily together for many years. Hardly any one who has known us intimately can fail to have known that we are, in all respects of character and temperament, wonderfully unsuited to each other. I suppose that no two people, not vicious in themselves, ever were joined together who had a greater difficulty in understanding one another, or who had less in common. An attached woman servant (more friend to us both than a servant,) who lived with us sixteen years, and is now married, and who was, and still is in Mrs Dickens' confidence and in mine, who had the closest familiar experience of this unhappiness, in London, in the country, in France, in Italy, wherever we have been, year after year, month after month, week after week, day after day, will bear testimony to this.

Nothing has, on many occasions, stood between us and a separation but Mrs Dickens' sister Georgina Hogarth. From the age of 15 she has devoted herself to our house and children. She has been pupil, mate, nurse, instructress, friend, preceptress, adviser and companion. In the manly consideration towards Mrs. Dickens, which I owe to my wife, I will merely remark of her, that the peculiarity of her character has thrown all the children on some one else. I do not know—I cannot by any stretch of fancy imagine—what would have become of them but for this aunt, who has grown up with them, to whom they are devoted, and who has sacrificed the best part of her youth and life to them.

She has remonstrated, reasoned, suffered, and toiled and came again to prevent a separation between Mrs. Dickens and me. Mrs. Dickens has often expressed to her her sense of her affectionate care and devotion in the house—never more strongly than within these last twelve months.

For some years past Mrs. Dickens has been in the habit of representing to me that it would be better for her to go away, and live apart; that her always increasing estrangement made a mental disorder under which she sometimes labors—more, that she felt herself unfit for the life she had to lead as a wife, and that she would be far better away. I have uniformly replied that we must bear our misfortune and fight the fight out to the end; that the children were the first consideration, and that I feared they must bind us together "in appearance."

At length, within these three weeks, it was suggested to me by Forster that, even for their sakes, it would surely be better to re-construct and re-arrange their unhappy home. I empowered him to treat with Mrs. Dickens, as the friend of both of us for one and twenty years. Mrs. Dickens wished to add on her part, Mark Lemon, and did so. On Saturday last Lemon wrote to Forster that Mrs. Dickens "gratefully and thankfully accepted" the terms I proposed to her.

Of the pecuniary part of them, I will only say that I believe they are as generous as if Mrs. Dickens were a lady of distinction, and I a man of fortune. The remaining part of them are easily described—my eldest son to live with Mrs. Dickens and take care of her; my eldest girl to keep my house—both my girls and all my children but the eldest son, to live with me, in the continued companionship of their aunt Georgina, for whom they have all the tenderest affection that I have ever seen amongst young people, and who has a higher claim (as I have often declared for many years,) upon my affection, respect and gratitude, than anybody in this world.

I hope that no one who may become acquainted with what I write here, can possibly be so cruel and unjust as to put any misconstruction on our separation, so far. My elder children all understand it perfectly, and all accept it as inevitable. There is not a shadow of doubt or concealment among us—my eldest son and I are one, as to it all.

Two wicked persons, who should have spoken very differently of me, in consideration of earned respect and gratitude, have (as I am told, and indeed to my personal knowledge) coupled with this separation the name of a young lady for whom I have a great attachment and regard. I will not repeat her name—I honor it too much. Upon my soul and honor, there is not on this earth a more virtuous and spotless creature than that young lady. I know her to be innocent and pure, and as good as my own dear daughters. Further, I am quite sure that Mrs. Dickens, having received this assurance from me, must now believe it, in the respect I know her to have for me, and in the perfect confidence I know her in her better moments to repose in my truthfulness.

On this head again, there is not a shadow of doubt or concealment between my children and me. All is open and plain among us, as though we were brothers and sisters. They are perfectly certain that I would not deceive them, and the confidence among us is without a fear. C. D.

May 29, 1858.

It having been stated to us that in reference to the differences which have resulted in the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dickens, certain statements have been circulated that such differences are occasioned by circumstances deeply affecting the moral character of Mr. Dickens and compromising the reputation and good name of others, we solemnly declare that we now disbelieve such statements. We know that they are not believed by Mrs. Dickens, and we pledge ourselves on all occasions to contradict them, as entirely destitute of foundation.

(Here follow the signatures of Mrs. Hogarth and her youngest daughter.) D. J. A.

"The Capture of the Algerine Admiral."—"The Fourth a Glorious Day in the History of our Nation."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Since you have been polite enough to admit my communication on the above subject to your columns, to which a reply was published by your anonymous correspondent J. L. D., who, by a sort of special pleading, attempts to defeat facts, which at all times are mighty and will, prevail, permit me again to trouble you on the subject, and to place a shot in the hull of your Incognito, "between wind and water," and if he receives a raking fire "fore and aft," it is his own fault and not mine, as his pertinacity has invited it;—and I hope he will be careful hereafter of "the truth of history"—especially "chronological history"—of which he "believes me ignorant" I wish, Mr. Editor, that he would fight openly, under his own flag, and not from behind a Barricade, so that I might respectfully invite him to call and read the documentary proof in my possession, to satisfy him that I am right; I have no doubt the gentleman honestly thinks himself so, and hence made the "chronological" (historical) error. But we are all mortals, and liable to err.

I now say that, laying aside "the capture of the Admiral"—which was not on "the 4th of July, 1815"—as asserted by him; SOMETHING WAS "The peace with the Dey of Algiers" made "and finished" on any of our glorious Fourths of July; but IT WAS made, signed, and finished on Friday, the thirtieth (30th) day of June, 1815, signed by the Dey of Algiers at his Palace at 11 o'clock of said thirtieth of June, 1815, and brought on board the flag-ship Guerriere, forty-four guns, anchored in the roads of Algiers, 12 M., of same day,—in the Royal Barge, by Mr. Needding, the Consul General of Sweden, (who acted as mediator,) and then and there the said treaty was signed and sealed by Commodore Decatur and Wm. Shaler, on behalf of the United States, as plenipotentiaries,—so that, Mr. Editor, J. L. D. had better strike his flag, and not fight against truth and impossibilities, and come at once from behind his cover.

The published treaty referred to, (a printed copy of which I now transmit to you, Mr. Editor, for inspection) runs thus: "Treaty with Algiers"—"Whereas, a treaty of peace and amity between the United States of America and his Highness Omar Bashaw, Dey of Algiers, was made and concluded at Algiers on the thirteenth day of December, 1815, by Stephen Decatur and William Shaler, Commissioners of the United States of America, of the one part, and the said Omar Bashaw, Dey of Algiers—and it was duly signed and sealed, (then) by the said parties, in the words following,—to wit:" Then follows 22 sections, or articles, which were ratified by the Senate, and "proclaimed," as above quoted, by President Madison on the 26th December, 1815. Mr. Editor, on the thirtieth June, 1815 then, "It is finished"—"It is finished"—not "commencement"—and not upon the glorious Fourth of July—J. L. D. to the contrary notwithstanding.* J. B. Parson Brownlow Up—He Gives an "Opinion as is an Opinion."

Parson Brownlow's last paper contains the following racy correspondence:

War Trace, Tenn., July 28, 1858.

Mr. W. G. Brownlow—Sir: After considering your course through life, as a gentleman and a politician, I am forced to say that you are the grandest rascal, and the grandest liar out of hell. Acknowledge the receipt of this, and you will oblige yours, &c.

T. W. RICH.

Knoxville, July 31, 1858.

Mr. T. W. Rich:—I have your note of the 28th inst., setting forth your very unfavorable opinion of me.

You are the quack Doctor who ran for the Legislature in Wilson County, on the Democratic ticket, and in consequence of your bad morals, and want of integrity and talents, was unable to carry the strength of your own party. Loose as their morals are known to be. After this defeat you removed to the County of Bedford, and settled at War-Trace, where you have acquired quite a reputation by your visits to the "Grapevine Inn," and the nocturnal meetings you hold with your Democratic associates, both male and female. It is said you there have all things in common, including your liquor, and that you are carrying out Democratic principles in more ways than one. Your custom of not paying your debts, of drinking mean whiskey to excess, of keeping bad company, both male and female, and lying upon and abusing your betters, has induced decent men to avoid you. I am pleased to learn that you make it a daily business to abuse me. I have managed through life to incur the displeasure of all liars, adulterers, gamblers, drunkards, thieves, and low-down scavengers and by this means satisfied strangers that I am opposed to these classes of men. I would be very sorry to bear of your speaking well of me, as it might lead persons unacquainted with me, to suppose that there is some trait in my character that a scoundrel admires!

In thus acknowledging the receipt of your note, I don't want you to infer that I will notice anything else you may say or write, or stoop to hold a correspondence with a man of your character.

I am, &c.,
W. G. BROWNLOW.

Resolutions of the Canadian Parliament against renewing the Hudson's Bay Company's License, adopted Aug. 13, 1858.

Resolved, 1. That the approaching termination of the license of trade granted by the Imperial Government to the Hudson's Bay Company, over the Indian territories, a portion of which, in the opinion of the Province, Canada has a right to claim as forming part of her territory, renders imperative the adoption of such measures as may be necessary to give effect to the rights of the Province; and presents a favorable opportunity for obtaining a final decision on the validity of the Charter of the Company, and the boundary of Canada on the north and west.

2. That Canada, whose rights stand affected by that Charter, to which she was not a party, and the validity of which has been questioned for more than a century and a half, has, in the opinion of this House, a right to request from the Imperial Government a decision of this question, with the view of putting an end to discussions and questions of conflicting rights, prejudicial as well to the Imperial Government as to Canada, and which, when unsettled, must prevent the colonization of the country.

3. That the settlement of the boundary line is immediately required, and that therefore this House should address Her Majesty praying that the subject thereof may be forthwith submitted for the opinion of the Judicial Committee of Her Privy Council, but without restriction as to any question Canada may deem it proper to present on the validity of the said Charter, or for the maintenance of her rights.

4. That any renewal of the license to trade over the Indian Territories should, in the opinion of this House, be granted only upon the conditions that such portions thereof, or of the other Territories claimed by the Company, (even if their Charter be held valid,) as may be required from time to time to be set apart by Canada, or by her Majesty's Government, into settlements for colonization, should, as so required, be withdrawn from under any such license and the jurisdiction and control of the said Company; and that her Majesty's Government, or the Governor-General in Council, should be permitted to grant licenses to trade in any portions of the said territories while held by or in occupation of the said Company, upon such conditions for the observance of law and the preservation of the peace; for the prohibition or restriction of the sale of ardent spirits; for the protection of Indian Tribes from injury or imposition, and with such other provisions as to her Majesty's Government or to his Excellency in Council may seem advisable.

5. That, in the opinion of this House, Canada should not be called upon to compensate the said Company for any portion of such territory from which they may withdraw or be compelled to withdraw—but that the said Company should be allowed to retain and dispose of any portion of the lands thereof on which they have built or improved.

6. That a joint address of both Houses, embodying the foregoing resolutions, be presented to Her Majesty.

The Riviere and Blount Case—Another Installment.

The Savannah Republican of the 13th has the following:

"Some of our cotemporaries, in writing of this curious romance, seem to think the object of the Zouave is to marry the subject of his adoration, Miss Blount. This is a mistake. The young lady asserts unqualifiedly that they were lawfully married before they made the tour to New-York, and had lived as man and wife for weeks before the separation. The secret of his pertinacity, then, is simply to hold on to the prize already won. The fact of his having another wife in the State of Pennsylvania seems to be, in the present status of the case, the only family obstacle to his success.

By the way, we learn that the romantic Captain grew quite chivalrous on the eve of his departure from Savannah. He remarked on board the steamer that fighting was simply a pastime with him, and if any gentleman desired to be amused in that way he was always ready to accommodate him after breakfast hours, as he was generally at leisure the remainder of the day. He would lie over 'till the next steamer to oblige a belligerent—meet him half way, or, rather than be nice about it, go the whole distance himself! Verily, the Zouave is a trump.

According to the Mobile Mercury Mrs. Blount still has a weakness for the Captain. The Mercury of the 11th says:

A passenger on the Le Grande gives us some particulars of the passage of these notable persons down the river. Before the Le Grande got under way, Mrs. Blount managed to send off a letter by a cabin boy, to be mailed, addressed to some of Dr Riviere's aliases, which had probably been agreed on between them. The Captain smelt a rat, and managed to intercept and detain the suspicious missive. After he had got under way, he informed Col. Blount of what he had done, and proffered to deliver the letter to him. Blount declined receiving it at the time, saying to the Captain, that he felt himself incompetent to manage the affair, and a determination to take no further steps until he arrived at Mobile and consulted with his friends. Our passenger, however, is of opinion that Col. Blount obtained a sight of the letter before he left the boat, as he saw him conversing with the Captain and Clerk, and the three together go to the hurricane roof, as if to carry on a consultation more uninterruptedly. Mrs. Blount was probably unaware of the detention of her letter. Mrs. Blount confined herself very closely to her state room on the passage. Miss Emily, however, wouldn't be caged and took the range of the boat as ladies are wont. She seemed sprightly, and hopeful, and self-possessed. It was observed that none of the ladies, and but few of the gentlemen, seemed to be acquainted with her, or, at any rate, to hold any intercourse with her. The three got off the boat at Meaher's Mill and sent to town for a carriage.

Assault upon a Newspaper Reporter.—On Friday night, between the hours of 11 and 12, a most dastardly assault was committed upon the person of Mr. Allen E. Forrester, one of the reporters of this paper, at his own house, and under circumstances of peculiar indignity and outrage. Mr. Forrester at the time was sitting in his parlor; his door-bell was rung, and his wife, who answered the summons, found two men on the steps, who desired to speak to her husband in private. Mr. Forrester, going to the door to ascertain their business, was immediately and violently assaulted by them, and with difficulty escaped into the house. The screams of the wife, who was a witness of the assault, alarmed the neighborhood, and caused the cowardly assailan's to retreat. This affair, together with numerous threats of further violence which have been made against Mr. Forrester, have so far operated upon his mind, as to cause him to abandon his situation upon this paper, and leave the city. In so acting he has yielded, we believe, to the representations and entreaties of his family, whose apprehensions have naturally been excited for his personal safety. This is another illustration of the system of violence and intimidation which has been adopted towards this paper and its employes, and of the sort of security which citizens enjoy under the present blessed administration of our municipal affairs. We submit the facts to the candid judgment of an impartial public, without further comment.—Baltimore Exchange.

Straw and Palm-leaf Paper Manufacturers.—At a Convention called by Manufacturers of Straw and Palm-leaf Papers, held at Tammany Hall, in the City of New-York, on Wednesday the 11th of August, 1858, Saml. Hanna being elected Chairman and E. M. Covenay Secretary, the following preambles and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, In consequence of the great depression in trade, and the ruinously low prices at which straw paper is now sold, and offered in the market, and in consideration of the large amount of capital invested, and the number of persons employed in its manufacture, and the loss to all engaged in the production of wrapping-paper, and believing that any legitimate employment ought to yield a fair remuneration to those engaged therein, and believing that the consumers of this article are not reaping corresponding advantages to the losses sustained by the manufacturers, and believing, also, that the only way to remedy the evil is to raise the price of the article, and consequently, the wages of the hands employed, therefore,

"Resolved, That we agree to adopt a schedule to take effect on and after the 1st of September next, for the purpose of increasing the price to a living profit, and reducing the supply of paper in the market.

Resolved, That a suitable number of persons be appointed as a Committee to confer with those absent, and induce them to comply with the foregoing resolutions.

Resolved, That the present Chairman and Secretary be continued in office for the period of one year from this date.

POLITICAL.

Senator Douglas on the Stump—A Scrap of His Early History.

In a speech at Winchester, Ill., delivered on the 7th inst, Mr. Douglas said:

"Twenty-five years ago I entered this town on foot, with my coat upon my arm, without an acquaintance in a thousand miles, and without knowing where I could get money to pay a week's board. Here I made the first six dollars I ever earned in my life, and obtained the first regular occupation that I ever pursued. For the first time in my life I then felt that the responsibilities of manhood were upon me, although I was under age, for I had none to advise with and knew no one upon whom I had a right to call for assistance or for friendship. Here I found the then settlers of the country my friends—my first start in life was taken here, not only as a private citizen, but my first election to public office by the people was conferred upon me by those whom I am now addressing and by their fathers. A quarter of a century has passed, and that penniless boy stands before you with his heart full and gushing with the sentiments which such associations and recollections necessarily inspire."

In the course of his speech, alluding to the returns of the last Kansas election, he said:

"From papers which I received on my way up this morning, containing returns from a large portion of the Territory of Kansas, I find that the Lecompton Constitution has been rejected by a majority of more than ten to one. [Great applause.] There have been some men in this State very anxious to know why I did not acquiesce in the English bill, by which the Constitution was referred back to the people of Kansas, and I have said to them uniformly, that while I did not like the form of submission, because I did not think it was fair, just or equal to offer an inducement for the people to vote either one way or the other, yet that the vote taken under that bill would be decisive, and I would cheerfully acquiesce in the settlement of the question. The people of Kansas, as you are aware, have decided against the Lecompton Constitution, and, I am free to say, that, as they have killed it, I most cheerfully acquiesce in the death of Lecompton. [Laughter and cheers.]

Mr. Buchanan will now have an opportunity of carrying out his recommendation that the example of Minnesota, in which case Congress required a submission of the Constitution to the people before admission shall be followed in all future cases, in the case of Kansas, and I will stand by him in insisting upon a submission of the Constitution of Kansas to the people of that Territory, thus preventing any controversy like that over the Lecompton Constitution from ever raising again. [Cheers and a voice from an old man, 'Stephen, you shall be the next President.']

My friend, I appreciate the kindness of heart which makes you put forth that prediction, but will assure you that it is more important to this country—to your children and to mine—that the great principle which we are now discussing shall be carried out in good faith by the party than it is that I or any other man shall be President of the United States. [Three cheers.] I am also free to say to you that whenever the question arises with me whether I shall be elevated to the Presidency or any other high position, by the sacrifice of my principles, I will stand by my principles and allow the position to take care of itself. [Three cheers.] I have always admired that great sentiment put forth by the illustrious Clay, that he would rather be right than be President. [Good.] I say to you that I have more pride in my history connected with this great principle of popular sovereignty than I would have in a thousand Presidencies." [Three cheers.]

Commissioners of Health.

The Commissioners of Health met at the City Hall on Monday.

Previously to the meeting it was said it can now be proved that Miss Cross, who died recently from yellow fever, visited one of the infected vessels below Townsend's dock, for the purpose, as is alleged, of obtaining a draught of water. Mary Anne Hendricken, the servant of the deceased Miss Cross, and who was in the habit of accompanying Miss Cross in her boating excursions, is now in Hospital, and in a fair way of recovery.

The ship John N. Genin was granted a permit to come up to the City on the 23d inst. Permits were granted to the ship Messenger, from Sagua la Grande, to come up on the 23d inst.; the ship N. & J. C. Gillmore, on the 17th inst.; the bark Albertina on the 20th inst.; the ship Ratler on the 19th inst.; the bark Cuba on the 23d inst., and an application from the bark Louis Bliss was referred to the Health Officer, with power.

The steamer Philadelphia was ordered to have her passengers and luggage sent to the City, after ventilation of the latter.

The Commission then adjourned.

Coroner's Inquests.

Death of a Sailor from Supposed Violence.—James Reynolds, the sailor formerly of the ship Galatin, of Boston—a report of whose ante-mortem examination appeared in Monday's Times—died yesterday at the City Hospital. An inquest was held yesterday on the body. John Jones, employed as a seaman on board the same ship at the time of the alleged violence towards the deceased by Baker, the first mate, corroborated the statement made by Reynolds. A post-mortem examination of the body disclosed a large cancerous tumor in the abdomen, and several ulcers. The examining physician gave it as his opinion that, although the cancer was the immediate cause of death, it might have been induced or hastened by the violence received. A verdict was rendered in accordance with this statement. A warrant has already been issued for the arrest of Baker, the mate, but he is said to be on board the Gladiator, on her way to China. The deceased was 25 years of age, and a native of Ireland.

Private Watchman Found Drowned.—The body of Thomas McConnell, a private watchman, who has been missing since Wednesday last, was found yesterday in the water, foot of Pier No. 3 North River. Coroner Gamble held an inquest on the body, and no marks of violence being found, a verdict of "Supposed accidental drowning" was rendered.

Found Dead in Bed.—A Frenchman, named Rudolph Siebe, was found dead in his bed Sunday night at No. 50 Franklin-street. Coroner Gamble held an inquest yesterday on the body and the jury rendered a verdict of "Death from congestion of the brain." The deceased was a bookkeeper and 60 years of age.

Fatal Camphene Casualty.—An inquest was held yesterday, at No. 86 Roosevelt-street, upon the body of Adelaide Lorman, three years of age, who died from burns received last Tuesday evening. A servant girl was filling a lighted lamp with camphene when the lamp exploded, burning the little girl so badly that she died of the wounds thus received. Verdict accordingly.

Death from Sun-stroke.—Mary Jane McDage, a poor Irish woman, fell dead yesterday in the Park, from the effects of a sun-stroke. Coroner Connery held an inquest on the body, and a verdict was awarded of "Death from coup de soleil, superinduced by debility."

CHAS. MORAN, President.

OFFICE NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD CO., New-York, June 14, 1858.

THE NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD Company have earnestly endeavored during the past two months to establish and maintain uniform and remunerative rates of traffic by the four great lines which connect the Atlantic cities and the West. Having failed in this, and believing it to be injudicious and improper to influence traffic by the laws of free power, by the employment of runners and solicitors or by any other undue means, the Company, rather than resort to such means, have determined to reduce the fares, on and after Monday next, 14th inst., as follows: between
New-York and Dunkirk, to.....$8 10
New-York and Buffalo, to.....5 00
New-York and Niagara Falls, or Suspension Bridge, to.....5 00
CHARLES MORAN, President.

CENTR

NEW-YORK CITY.

Great Satisfaction of Orientalists.

The grand excursion and pic-nic, projected by Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood, in behalf of the employés of their extensive Howard Street Manufactory, on twelve views, came off on Saturday last, and resulted in a pleasant and delightful reunion.

The steamer and one barge lay at the foot of Spring-street, North River, and after taking on about three hundred persons, sailed around to the foot of Montgomery-street, East River, where another barge was stationed with over five hundred persons on board, which was taken in tow, and the squadron commenced moving up the East River, for David's Island, near New Rochelle, which had been engaged by Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood, exclusively for the use of the company.

The gangways were untied, and the decks of the barges and the steamer, under the influence of the music made by Dodworth's Band, soon became animated with groups of dancers and promenaders, and a more joyous scene could not be well imagined.

The various representatives of the Press, secular and religious, were in attendance, with many ladies, invited guests of the firm.

A force of twenty-five Metropolitan Policemen, under Officer Parry, were on board, notwithstanding which, a number of roughs and pickpockets contrived to get on board. They were immediately spotted, and five of them, in course of the trip, were arrested, and the remainder held in rigid check.

The company reached the island and were safely landed at 12 o'clock, when the tables were spread and a dinner party comprising not less than six acres was improvised. The specially invited guests were divided into two parties, and sat down at two seats of tables spread in the large building designed for dining and cooking purposes, and as a dancing hall—the island being a favorite resort for pleasure parties from all directions. After the creature comforts were disposed of, the company went in miscellaneously for fun and enjoyment. Dancing, scupping, foot-races, blind-man's-buff and quoits were indulged in quite heartily on the outside, while the dinner party on the inside ended with toasts and speeches, which soon drew a large crowd and made it necessary for safety to adjourn to a neighboring rock, when the speeches, interspersed with music, were resumed. The health of the hosts, Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood, were drunk with three times three, to which Mr. Douglas responded in a very happy manner, stating that it had been their intention for some time to give the girls in their establishment a pleasure party to which they could invite their friends, and that having recently moved into new quarters, they had thought that the present time was appropriate to carry this design into effect. They had chosen the present form of arrangement, as being the best method to secure the greatest amount of enjoyment to the greatest number. Everything had been provided at their own expense, including the regular wages of all their hands for the day. Mr. Douglas sat down amid hearty applause.

Mr. H. L. Stuart was called for, and soon made his appearance on the rock, while a song written for the occasion, by Solon Robinson, was being sung. The song being ended Mr. Stuart spoke substantially as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: I am one of those who believe that all such gatherings as this should be made subservient to the highest interests of all concerned, and especially a means for inforcing practical hints and suggestions that will be likely to take root, and bring forth, in due time, good fruits for the benefit of the toiling millions. I have observed the growth of this establishment of Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood with much interest, and perhaps from a partial standpoint, for I look upon it as a model establishment—and I will, in brief, tell you why. Some ten years since, I was employed, under the authority of the Board of Education, to visit all the great workshops of the City of New-York, for the purpose of interesting employers in the Evening Schools, and to awaken a wide-spread interest in the community, and in the minds of the fifty thousand young men and women, many of them girls and boys, employed in these great industrial establishments, for whose benefit these schools were specially organized. I visited more than three hundred establishments and conversed with proprietors and foremen, leaving circulars and meeting personally with a great number of young persons. While on this duty, I called upon Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood. I stated my purpose, which met, at once, with a prompt and hearty response. Both proprietors expressed a readiness to aid in carrying out any suggestions that I chose to make that would be likely to secure the results of my mission. Lectures on Physiology and the best means of preserving the health, and on other practical subjects, were suggested, several of which were given in the workroom; also a library for the use of the girls, which has been carried into effect and forms an important feature in the establishment, the library having a fine collection of nearly 2,000 volumes. About six weeks since, want of room compelled Messrs. D. & S. to remove to a splendid new building on Whitehall-street. Their manufactory has a white marble front 40 feet wide and is 120 feet deep, and has seven stories, occupied by more than 1,000 artisans, 900 of whom are girls and young women, with about 300 Wheeler & Wilson sewing-machines, and numerous ingenious labor-saving devices made by Mr. Douglas, the whole force and machinery being equal to 4,000 trained workwomen and men, and producing from five to eight thousand skirts per day.

In addition to the main building, there is a large four-story dwelling-house, which is used for the library, a reception-room, toilet, and cloak rooms; a dining room, kitchen and a suite of rooms for the housekeeper and assistants.

Nine and a half hours a day, and on Saturday but [illegible] to the period allotted to work, continue and a [illegible] than any other establishment [illegible]

[illegible] are some of the reasons why I have been interested, and took upon this great hoop-skirt establishment as a model institution. Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood were the only employers who took active [illegible] and practical [illegible] in all matters [illegible] We believe that every hour actually devoted to the increase of intelligence and comfort [illegible] the quantity and quality of the work done, and we will do all that we can to induce our girls to attend on the Evening Schools you represent, and in every way do our best to protect the health and add to the comfort, respectability, intelligence and happiness of all who work for us. We believe this to be our wisest business policy, apart from any higher motive."

You have seen to-day, in this lavish expenditure of more than two thousand dollars, and in the acres of joyous youth before us, some of the results of this liberal, generous and suggestive policy which, I hope, will be imitated universally by those having the direction of other industrial establishments in the City and country.

Mr. Robinson, of the Tribune, was called for, and introduced Mr. Oliver Johnson, who delivered a Hard Shell Baptist sermon, which elicited roars of laughter, after which Mr. Robinson took the rock and delivered a humorous poem, entitled "Crinoline," that made lively fun.

Mr. J. O. Wood, Mr. Swackhamer and Officer Parry made short and spicy speeches.

The company assembled on board at 4 o'clock, reaching the City at about 7 o'clock.

The only incident occurring on the way worthy of special note grew out of a drunken brawl between a couple of short-boys, who brought a bottle of whisky on board, one of whom shot himself in the neck with a pepper wad, and fell down and had the nose-bleed, causing a momentary trace of tragedy to the occasion.

Police Intelligence.

A Vile Wretch—An Attempted Murder.—Peter Young, although not yet twenty-five years of age, is one of the most desperate characters in the Sixth Ward. He has for some time aspired to be a leader of the Dead-Rabbit gang, and has been an active and zealous member of the fraternity. He has very long, out of State Prisons two years, having served a term for taking the life of a man during a drunken fight on Mulberry street, near the Five Points. The Jury in that case brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree, and his imprisonment was light in consequence. Yesterday afternoon his sister called to see him at the corner of Park and Mulberry streets, where he lives, and he endeavored to counsel her to submit to his inhuman lust. The girl refused, and he seized a large knife and attempted to stab her with it, but she ran from him into Mulberry-street, and made her escape. The sister told another brother of the treatment she had received, and this brother called to reprimand the gross offender. When the latter at once rushed at him with a cheese-knife, and would doubtless have murdered him on the spot had not bystanders interposed and saved his life. A warrant was speedily issued for the arrest of Peter Young, and early last evening he was taken in custody by the Sixth Ward Police and detained to await an examination.

Sunday Pastime in the Nineteenth Ward.—[illegible] were observed on Sunday, in the Nineteenth Ward, by one Andrew Elliott, an Irish boiler maker, residing in Christopher Keyser, near Second-avenue. Elliott, was not satisfied with the observance of Sunday according to rule, but [illegible] the Sabbath on the occasion of the [illegible] Police took Elliott in custody, and he was taken before a Police Magistrate and locked up. Francis McDermott, a neighbor, and Patrick Quin, had an altercation, which ended in the former drawing a knife and stabbing his opponent, inflicting a deep and frightful cut. The assailant, McDermott, and he was locked up to await the result of the injuries inflicted. John Ryan, a friend of McDermott, undertook to prevent the officers from arresting McDermott, and for this friendly interference he was taken in custody and placed in a cell.

The Trainer of the "Benicia Boy" Fighting on His Own Hook.—Joe Coburn, an Englishman, has undertaken the job of training the "Benicia Boy" for the forthcoming fight for $2,000, with Morrissey. The process of training is going on at Jim Hughes' place, on the Bloomingdale Road, and the presumption was that every minute of Joe's time was occupied with his pupil. This is not so, for Joe frequently strays to the City. At a late hour on Sun'ay evening, while at the Adriatic, corner of Hudson and Barrow streets, he got into an altercation with Alexander Mason, the proprietor of the house. A splendid row took place between them. Mason's education on the up and down strokes and side licks has not been altogether neglected, and he made some very fancy hits. Joe, despite his superior science, did not manage to get the best of Aleck. Joe carried away a few impressions of Aleck's fists about his nose and face. Aleck got a slight flesh wound across his right cheek, and the side of his nose slightly cut.

A Waiter Robbing a Waiter.—Patrick Quirk and John O'Connor, two hotel waiters, availed themselves of Sunday—it being their "day off"—to go to Yorkville and have a good time. They took divers drinks together, and O'Connor, by the time they were ready to return to the City, was gloriously "tight." A drink after leaving the cars rendered him gloriously unconscious of passing events, and this temporary unconsciousness his comrade used to good advantage by enticing him into an alley and robbing him of about $5 in money and a silver watch. Quirk was afterwards arrested, the property recovered, and the prisoner locked up by Justice Kelly to answer.

Pickpockets at the Catholic Cathedral.—The light-fingered gentry were pretty abundant, Sunday, among the immense throng gathered to witness the laying of the corner-stone of the Catholic Cathedral in Fifth-avenue. Owing to the crowd of policemen in attendance they worked very carefully. Five three women and two men, were arrested by the Detective Police. The prisoners were taken yesterday morning to the Police Head-quarters, the rogues' rectypes added to the Rogues' Gallery, after which they were sent to the Tombs. The prisoners gave their names as Charles Brown, Wm. Smith, Ann Walker, Ann Gordon and Nora McGregor.

Descent on a Lager-Bier Saloon.—About 10½ o'clock on Sunday evening, Capt. Squires, of the Eleventh Ward, and a posse of his men, made a descent on the lager bier saloon, at No. 264 Stanton-street. A large quantity of visitors were having a lively time dancing, card-playing and guggling lager. Frederick Miller, the proprietor of the place, and two others, were arrested and taken to the Station-house and locked up.

Successful Burglary.—The fancy goods store of Schiller & Colson, No. 783½ Bowery, was entered Monday morning by burglars and about $200 worth of goods stolen. The burglars effected an entrance into the place by cutting through a rear door. They escaped with their booty, and thus far have managed to elude the Police.

Boy Drowned.—James McKeon, a boy, 11 years of age, Sunday afternoon, while playing with some other boys on a raft in the dock foot of Delancey street, accidentally fell into the water and was drowned. The body was taken to the residence of his parents, No. 56 Jackson street, where the Coroner held an inquest this morning, a verdict of "accidental drowning" being rendered.

Dishonest Servant.—Mary Ann Williams, a servant in the employ of Mr. Birdsall, of No. 299 Spring-street, was taken in custody yesterday, charged with stealing to the value of $64. She had pawned most of the clothing. Justice Kelly locked her up for trial.

Messrs. Gomez & Mills, inventors of the new patent safety-fuse train, respectfully invite the civil and military authorities, members of the Press, and the public generally, to witness an exhibition of their new safety fuse as applied to the firing of cannon, which will take place, by permission of his Honor, the Mayor, Daniel F. Tiemann, Esq., at the Battery, on Tuesday next, Aug. 17, at 4 P. M. The submarine fuse will be attached to a battery of ten guns, (six-pounders,) which will be instantly and simultaneously fired from a boat in the river some thousand feet from the shore. Cannon will also be repeatedly discharged from various points with lengths of the land train, to illustrate the extreme velocity (second only to electricity) and safety of this new fuse in military operations, &c., while the availability of cannon after having been spiked by an enemy will be demonstrated by using the muzzle instead of the vent hole for the insertion of the fuse. Every accommodation will be afforded for spectators, a force of police will be upon the ground, and the proceedings cannot fail to prove attractive to all interested in inventions and the progress of military and naval science.

Monday, Aug. 16—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the past week, ending Saturday, Aug. 14, the particulars of which are advertised separately on another page of this paper, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, Aug. 7:

Increase in Loans	$2,481,602
Decrease in Specie	3,995,371
Decrease in Circulation	195,476
Decrease in Undrawn Deposits	323,523

Including the exchanges among or between the Banks through the Clearing-House, which average $15,208,690, and are taken from the Gross in order to ascertain the Net or Undrawn Deposits; and including also the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is the general comparison with the previous week, and also with the movement this time last season:

Comparative Recapitulation.

	Aug. 15, 1857.	Aug. 14, 1858.	Aug. 7, 1858.
Capital	$65,420,000	$66,717,000	$66,717,000
Loans	121,341,472	123,274,459	120,592,857
Specie	11,360,645	31,150,473	35,145,844
Circulation	6,780,012	7,068,939	7,784,415
Gross Deposits	98,236,398	105,634,772	107,454,715
Exchanged	20,541,290	15,208,690	17,115,329
Undrawn	66,814,929	89,625,662	90,949,609
In Sub-Treasury	12,822,808	12,660,816	5,953,477

It will be noticed that over three-fifths the difference in the Specie average goes into the Loan column. This is in consequence of the advances upon Government Stock. The mercantile Bills under discount have really run down on the present statement, as may be noted on the comparative list of banks which have decreased or increased the Loan column since last Monday. A similar state of things will probably be shown all round on the succeeding statement, when the full effect of the negotiation with the Government will be told. After that we look for a steadier movement. Two of the Banks—the Commerce and Manhattan—now hold under advances over three millions of the new Stock. The Merchants' and America are large bidders in the same way. The mercantile discounts at the Merchants' Bank have run off faster than their advances upon Government Stock have run up the Loan average. The Statement altogether is not materially different from the previous calculations made on the Street, except, perhaps, that the addition to the Loans is less than anticipated. Notwithstanding the drafts made upon the Banks by some of the heavy depositors to pay for Government Stock, the deposit line goes down only about half a million of dollars. This fact tells the story of the continued abundance of unemployed means on the Street. The improvement in general business is not yet sufficient to absorb, at a living rate of interest, the money which is held for use upon mercantile paper, and with the exception of the temporary demand from the Government there is too little doing in Stocks to put this money and other private capital out at call, even at very low rates of usance. Lenders are quite as abundant, to-day, and their terms about as moderate, as at any time during the season. As remarked this morning, the only change that we can hear of is on paper having over 90 days to run, and this more in the effort to raise the rates ¼@1 ℘ cent. per annum, than in the increased offering of such paper or the actual sales.

The additional sum paid into the Sub-Treasury to-day on the Government Stock is only $48,392. We understand the Secretary or Register of the Treasury has intimated, by letter, to a number of the large takers of the Stock, that the Department would feel greatly accommodated if these parties would afford a little time to fill in and transmit the Bonds. The Bonds number ten thousand, and to each is attached thirty half-yearly coupons, all of which have to be signed and numbered. The money has been paid into the Sub-Treasury with a rapidity wholly unexpected, after the offer of the Department to extend the time to Sept. 1, and thirty days thereafter if desirable.

There is an increased offering of Foreign Bills to-day, and the price on London opens for the Persia's mail at 109¾ ℘ cent., at which there is not much business yet done. The Bill Brokers on 'Change this afternoon decline to operate freely better than 109½ ℘ cent. Most of the remittances to be provided for go over to Tuesday. The export for Bullion is moderate. A parcel of Silver, $212,000, received to-day from New-Orleans may be transhipped for England. French Bills are 5,18¾@5,12½.

The market for Stocks is quite sluggish today, and without any particular cause for depression in prices, except the general dull feeling among the operators, the closing rates are down about ¼ ℘ cent. on New-York Central, Reading, Illinois Central, Rock Island, Toledo and Galena, and ⅛@¼ ℘ cent. on most other descriptions, except Panama and Pacific Mail, which continue strong and in steady demand. The dullness extended to Missouri State Stocks, which sold as low as 85 ℘ cent. There were no transactions at the Board in the new Federal Stock, as few of the holders are prepared to deliver the Bonds. The general market left off tame.

The following is Monday's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer:

Receipts	$358,827
Payments	450,040
Balance	12,795,604

The receipts include $89,000 from Customs.

The earnings of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company, during the month of July, were as follows, viz:

From Freight	$48,688 56
For Passengers	46,917 78
For Mail	4,462 29
For Rent of Road	5,900 00	$107,949 65
Miscellaneous		161 02
Earnings in same month last year		119,556 18
Decrease, (10 7 10 ℘ cent.)		$11,606 53
Expenses in July, 1858		75,802 65
Expenses in July, 1857		108 777 62
Decrease, (30⅓ ℘ cent)		$32,974 97
Net earnings in July, 1858		32,147 00
Net earnings in July, 1857		10,778 56
Increase (about 198 ℘ cent.)		21,368 44

The Wisconsin Governor on La Crosse—Letter of Governor Randall to the U. S. Land Office.

From the Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Executive Office, Madison, Wis., August 3, 1858.

Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, Commissioner of Land Office:

Sir: Your letter of July 23d, enclosing the copy of a communication from N. P. Stanton, Esq., President of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company, is received. In my letter of the 4th February, to your department, I did not give at length the reasons for my request that further action be suspended by the Land Department, until further information from the Executive Department of this State. I have given them frequently since that time to Mr. Stanton, and to the Directors of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad, and Mr. Stanton knows them full well, and that the same views were entertained by nearly the entire Legislature of that State during the last winter. Mr. Stanton and the entire Board of Directors of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company, have known these objections for six months, and have done nothing, in my judgment, towards a compliance with the law; but on the contrary, have been using a large amount of Land Grant Securities, at a most inexcusable sacrifice, to build a piece of railroad from Tomah to the city of La Crosse, entirely off the line of road for the building of which the grant was made by Congress, and which it is not pretended by the Company that they were authorized to build with funds derived from the sale of land belonging to that grant, or by the sale of securities based upon that grant.

The act of Congress approved June 3, 1856, "granting land to the State of Wisconsin to aid in the construction of Railroads in said State," provided in the first section, "that there be and is hereby granted to the State of Wisconsin for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a Railroad from Madison or Columbus by way of Portage City to the St. Croix River or Lake between townships twenty-five and thirty-one, and from thence to the west end of Lake Superior and to Bayfield, and also from Fond du Lac on Lake Winnebago northerly to the State line, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers, for six sections in width on each side of said Roads respectively," &c. The second provision of section one reads, "That the lands hereby granted shall be exclusively applied to the construction of the road for which it was granted and selected, and shall be disposed of only as the work progresses, and the same shall be applied to no other purpose whatsoever."

Section 3 reads: And be it further enacted, that the land hereby granted to said State shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature thereof, for the purposes aforesaid, and no other," &c.

The Legislature of this State, by an act approved Oct. 11, 1856, authorized the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Co. to build the road for the western division contemplated by the act of Congress, and to aid in its construction granted to that Company the lands donated by Congress for that purpose, upon conditions and reservations named in the act of the Legislature. The Legislature had a right to fix and prescribe the terms and conditions upon which it would confer that grant upon the La Crosse Company, the manner in which the Company should become invested with the lands, and determine in every respect the consideration the Company should pay, and the services it should perform, not inconsistent with the act of Congress. Through the act of the Legislature a contract was made by the State with the La Crosse Co. that the Company should build railroads from the city of Madison in the County of Dane, and from the village of Columbus in the county of Columbia, in the most direct and feasible route by the way of Portage City to the St. Croix River or Lake between townships twenty-five and thirty-one, and from thence to Lake Superior and to Bayfield, &c. The Company became a party to the contract with the State by formal acceptance, undertook and contracted to build the roads last above described, and as a consideration was entitled to receive and enjoy the lands granted to the State for that purpose, at the times, in the quantities and upon the conditions named in the act. The first provision of section 3 of the Legislative act, like a similar provision in the act of Congress, declares
